Mr. Rockefeller Sees Kindness.
How to Save $640,000,000.
T. W. Lamont Is Wise.
Man's Greatest War.
—By ARTHUR BRISBANE—

(Copyright, 1928.)

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER, beginning his ninetieth year yesterday, said: "I never worry, and I am amazed at the kindness of people generally."

Eighty years ago, from his father's cottage doorway in the Catskill foothills, he watched his uncle drive off, to trade horses—and saw him come back with better horses.

NOW his ships go out to every harbor of the world, his scientists are fighting disease in every part of the earth. And looking at his right hand, now wrinkled, he knows it has made gifts to education and human progress totaling hundreds of millions.

A good deal in one lifetime.

HIS fellow citizens hope that he will see his hundredth birthday and continue showing the people how to do things that they don't know enough to do for themselves.

IN seven years, ending with 1927, our Class One railroads saved $360,000,000, thanks to greater efficiency in fuel use.

Why not make a real fuel saving by harnessing the water power of the Niagara and St. Lawrence rivers? Dr. T. Kennard Thomson, an able engineer, has a plan that would dam the gorge of Niagara and produce 8,000,000 electric horsepower. Equivalent to saving 80,000,000 tons of coal, worth $640,000,000, every year.

THE estimated cost of the plan is $1,000,000,000, which could be invested at a profit.

Such development of power would promote industry amazingly.

The five pioneer power companies at Niagara spent $65,000,000, causing other investment in factories, railroads, etc., amounting to 10 times as much—$650,000,000.

If only the power trust would allow that Niagara plan to go through.

THOMAS W. LAMONT, partner of J. P. Morgan and an able citizen, tells business men they can be a distinct factor in preventing future wars.

They can and will be, for they have discovered that war, in the past often promoted by business, DOES NOT PAY.

ANOTHER big war would mean not merely 60 per cent income tax, but confiscation of principal, on a gigantic scale. Young men would not again consent to have their bodies sent to war, unless the rich man's dollars also went. Wise business men will oppose war and demand preparation for it.

NEWS from Seattle tells of an electric war against insect pests in orchards. Wires stretched above trees bombard insect life with an X-ray bombardment, said to be more effective than poisonous sprays. The experiments were dropped because they interfered with radio work, but the government wisely decided to permit experiments in early morning.

IF electric bombardment can kill the codlin moth, borer, scale or other fruit tree pests, it might also eliminate boll weevil and corn borer.

Man's great future war will be against insect and germ enemies. If he could apply to them an electric bombardment, fatal to their microscopic life, and harmless to larger creatures, as radium now fights cancer, one of the greatest problems would be solved.

BUSINESS begins the week cheerfully. The crop outlook is good, goods are moving more rapidly, automobile production continues at a high level, new advertising campaign by Ford, indicating that he will soon supply the demand.

EVEN the packers, with much to complain of since the war, are happy. Meat, wool, leather and fertilizers are selling in greater volume, at better prices. On the whole, we should be happy and grateful.

IN politics, both sides have their ups and downs. In Texas the drys organize a battle to prevent the election of Gov. Smith.

In Wisconsin, Senator Robert La Follette attacks the Republican platform, says no Progressive can be enthusiastic about it.

Six weeks hence, both parties will be thoroughly mixed up and you might pick up profitable bets unless you happened to be too much mixed yourself or your conscience said "no betting."

CATCHER EARL SMITH

Hard-hitting veteran of the Pirates, who was given his unconditional release by the local club today after all of the other clubs in the league had waived on him. The announcement of the club stated that the officials did not see how "Oil" could be of any value to the club in its fight to get back into the pennant race. Reports for several days have been that he was not in the good graces of the management.

Heat Kills 3; Rain Due

Thundershowers today were promised as relief from the intense heat that broke the season's record yesterday, took toll of three lives and caused severe suffering, particularly in the congested districts in the Pittsburgh area.

Two swimmers were drowned in local rivers and another death resulted from heat prostration. Thousands sought to escape the torrid torture in bathing pools, in the parks and by hunting cool spots in rural sections. The thermometer reached 92 at 5 and 6 o'clock yesterday afternoon, with no breath of moving air to temper the sweltering heat.

The mercury jumped 12 degrees between 7 and 9 yesterday morning and continued a steady climb until it reached the summer's record mark. The previous high mark was 86.5 Saturday afternoon.

The river victims are Frank Furguiele, 26, of 1205 Tenth street, Sharpsburg, and John Chusko, 16, of Vermont avenue, Duquesne.

Furguiele, a member of the Lone Wolf Camp at Parkview on the Allegheny River, drowned when seized with cramps. Chusko drowned when a skiff in which he was riding with his brother Frank, 14, upset in the Monongahela River at Dravosburg. The younger brother made heroic effort to save the elder, but failed.

Heat prostration caused the death late Saturday of Thomas Devlin, 22 of Hulton road, North Bessemer, according to a report to the coroner. Devlin had been swimming in the Allegheny River, near Oakmont, and when he left the water he collapsed. He died a short time later at home.

Baltimore Prefers "Dirt" to Art, Theater View

BALTIMORE, July 9.—A charge that Baltimoreans preferred "dirt" to art in the theater was made by William P. Farnsworth, co-producer with Edwin H. Knopp, Jr., of the Auditorium Players, in announcing the unexpected disbanding of that organization. Declaring that the company, which presented plays for 22 weeks had operated continually at a loss.

Mr. Farnsworth compared gross receipts for plays of different types as the basis for his charge.

Trolley Bandits Get $2,400, Flee

RWY. AGENT IS HELD UP AT CASTLE SHANNON

As coolly as if performing a routine task, two armed and masked highwaymen held up William Murray, Pittsburgh Railways Company dispatcher, and robbed him of $2,401.85. The holdup took place at Poplar and Willow avenues, Castle Shannon, at 9:30 o'clock this morning.

The bandits wrested a satchel containing the money from Murray and forced him at pistol point into a nearby store. Then they calmly entered a waiting automobile driven by a confederate and drove off in the direction of Mt. Lebanon.

J. V. Upperman, a bystander, noted the number of the robbers' car, an expensive sedan. It was found to be the property of H. F. Gleason, of Aylesboro avenue, stolen from Beechwood boulevard the night of July 2.

Patsy Feehan, 11, gave about as good a description of the robbers as was obtainable. She stood within a foot or two of them before they accosted Murray.

They were in their twenties, she judged, and wore soft felt hats, but one of them had a cap in his pocket. They had handkerchiefs around their necks fastened with tan shoestrings. They were short men.

Murray said the only words the bandits spoke were, "Stick them up!" He said he believed them to be "of foreign descent."

With hands up Murray, retreating from robbers, backed into the store of the Paton Hardware Company on Willow avenue. Once inside he gasped that he had been robbed. George Kahn, an employe, went out to investigate. By that time the bandits were stepping into the machine.

Murray proceeded to the First National Bank to which he was enroute when held up, and said he would have no money to deposit today. He makes daily trips with the receipts of street car conductors, turned in at the Castle Shannon car barns. It is supposed the robbers were familiar with his practice in this respect. They had been driving around the block for some minutes before he arrived.

Murray next informed Justice of the Peace John Popp, Jr., who promptly jumped into his own automobile and started in pursuit.

Murray's home is at 42 Wyoming street.

Paving Explodes As Mercury Hits 103

OIL CITY, Pa., July 9.—(AP.)—With thermometers in the business district of Oil City registering 103 yesterday afternoon, a section of the brick paving on William Flinn Highway between Oil City and Rouseville, gave way. The brick expansion in the intense heat caused an explosion that tore up a stretch from curb to curb for a width of four feet. Traffic was little delayed, however.

YORK, Pa., July 9.—(AP.)—The highest temperature reported here yesterday by the official observer was 95 degrees. However, the thermometer in the glass at a local drug store, an accurate instrument, relied on to show the true state of the temperature on downtown streets, up and burst just as the sun was going behind the western hills, after a good day's work.

ALLENTOWN, Pa., July 9.—(AP.)—Although yesterday was the hottest of the year there was but one heat prostration reported—and the victim was an iceman, Robert Knappenberger. His condition is not serious.

Shot Dead From Auto

On the slate recording the victims of underworld warfare today was listed another name—Barmiad Coalboda, 28, an Italian, of the North Side.

As Coalboda was walking in Fayette street, Woods Run, this morning a touring car pulled alongside him and rattled lead into his body. He died an hour later in Allegheny General Hospital, a leaden slug beneath his heart, another buried in his back.

As a final gesture, the killers—the underworld calls them "gorillas"—tossed a hot shotgun alongside the slumped body and sped away.

Coalboda was conscious a few minutes before he died, but Police Lieut. John Lynch reported "he wouldn't talk." Police believe Coalboda, possibly by mistake, was spotted for death by the profiteers of the underworld.

In the hip pocket of the slain man police found what they regarded as evidence that Coalboda was not wholly unprepared for attack—a .38 caliber revolver.

Straw Vote Nears Tie

Hoover and Smith ran practically tie on Saturday's straw vote being taken on voting machines throughout the district by The Sun-Telegraph, there being but eight ballots difference, in Hoover's favor, in 1,450 votes cast. The heavy Hoover vote from Washington (Pa) courthouse, evened the day's totals.

Today starts the third week of intensive straw balloting on machines and the interest grows, rather than diminishes. Many businessmen on Saturday asked if the machines would be in operation during evening hours, as they wanted to bring their families to vote. Women showed as keen an interest as men in operating the machines and expressing their presidential preference.

RURALS WANT TO VOTE

Numerous requests have been received by The Sun-Telegraph from rural committees asking that voting machines, on which a straw vote may be taken, be placed in those sections. It is the purpose of the newspaper to gather an exhaustive expression from as many people in different districts as possible and the outlying places will be canvassed as well as the city.

Results recorded by the machines until late Saturday follow:

CALIFORNIA FOR SMITH

SAN FRANCISCO, July 9.—On a strictly suburban vote, Gov. Smith, Democratic candidate for President, increased yesterday his lead over Herbert Hoover in the straw vote being conducted in Northern California by the Examiner.

No votes were recorded in San Francisco, the six voting machines being closed because of Sunday. From all other districts in this part of the state, however, ballots were received by mail. They showed a drift toward Smith in the districts regarded as Hoover strongholds.

The total vote cast in six days of balloting by machine in San Francisco and by mail in other localities:

Smith, 5,725.
Hoover, 2,675.

Of a total vote of 8,450 thus far cast, these figures reveal, the Democratic nominee has received more than 68 per cent. Hoover has received less than 32 per cent.

2 Poisoned In Plot on Pastor

CHILTON, Wis., July 9.—(AP.)—Spray-poisoned vegetables in the garden of the Rev. L. M. Harwood, of Trinity Presbyterian Church here, have caused a search by authorities for persons who sprayed the plants. Officers link the poison plot with recent dissensions in the pastor's parish.

Mr. Harwood and his 3-year-old son are ill as a result of eating radishes from the garden, and chemists said the two owed their lives to the fact that they ate only root vegetables. About three pounds of poison was sprayed on the garden, chemists found.

When the two became ill three weeks ago, suspicion was aroused. Rain washed away one coat of spray, but the minister discovered a second coating, and he notified the district attorney.

Some members of the congregation have complained to church officials in Milwaukee of the sarcastic nature of the Harwood sermons, and he has received several threatening letters, warnig him to leave Chilton.

Ejection by the church board of several members of the congregation precipitated the discord, the minister said. These barred from the church enlisted the help of the Ladies' Aid Society and the activities led to disbandment of the society by the board.

Earl Smith, a storm center of National League baseball for many years, this afternoon was released unconditionally by the Pittsburgh club. The 15 other major league teams granted the waiver requests of the local team.

Manager Donie Bush, of the Pirates, has been displeased with the actions of the ultra-aggressive catcher and after he had informed Owner Barney Dreyfuss that he did not wish to keep Smith any longer waivers on Smith were asked and procured.

The stormy petrel thus passes out of Pittsburgh baseball, despite the fact he still is a young man, and apparently with years of good baseball in him if he wishes to bring it out.

Earl was handicapped for a big part of the present season with a bad leg, injured in the first week of the race in Cincinnati. Recently, he had talked out of turn to Pilot Bush and in the last few days he has been on the bench exclusively. Evidently the directors of the club benched him when the request went in for waivers.

SLUGGED COACH

During his service under John McGraw, of the Giants, the departing Pirate receiver was in one jam after another for violations of rules. He was fined repeatedly, it is said, while a member of the Giants, and at one time he drew down the ire of the New York Manager when he Repairs, it is estimated, will require three or four days and it is likely that the plane may be towed on a raft to Natal for mechanics to work on it.

Crime Squad Formed

16 CYCLE POLICE ADDED

A new plan for policing the city and outlying districts by motorcycle policemen, on 24-hour duty at most police stations, was inaugurated today by Police Superintendent Peter P. Walsh. Numerous robberies and holdups in the sparsely settled sections of the city in recent months resulted in the plan for better police protection.

A new squad of motorcycle officers is being organized from police ranks. Policemen selected for tests as to their riding ability were being examined today by Assistant Superintendent Leo D. Coleman. The tests were conducted on the Washington boulevard near the Brilliant pumping station. The limited number of policemen necessitates organizing this squad from the ranks, Supt. Walsh stated.

The squad will be composed of 16 men, stationed as follows: Frankstown Avenue Station, 2; Squirrel Hill, 3; Oakland, 2; West End, 3; Mt. Washington, 2; South Side, 1; Carrick, 1, and North Side, 2. None will be attached to the downtown station. Except at the South Side

ROME, July 9.—(AP.)—The Stefani News Agency which has been in constant touch with the Nobile rescue operations through the base ship Citta Di Milano announced today that rumors of Natalie Ceccioni, motor chief, had died from injuries received in the crash were false.

OSLO, Norway, July 9.—With one of their number reported dead, two others suffering from pneumonia, and starvation facing the remaining two, the marooned survivors of the lost dirigible, Italia, were in a sad plight today.

Ceccioni, the Italia's chief mechanic, has succumbed to the injuries he received when the gondola of the Italia crashed on the ice on the morning of May 25, according to reports reaching here from Virgo Bay.

The two men suffering from pneumonia are said to be in high fever as the result of their privations and exposure on their ice-floe encampment. All the isolated men under Lieut. Viglieri's command are said to be practically starving and so weak as to be hardly able to drag themselves across the ice.

LEEDS AND ACTRESS BURNED

OYSTER BAY, N. Y., July 9.—(AP.)—Her life saved in a boat explosion by William B. Leeds, son of the late tin plate king, Adele Astaire, actress, was in a hospital today. When Leed's $75,000 speedboat, Fan Tail, burned to the water edge at a pier here yesterday afternoon, both were severely burned.

Leeds and Miss Astaire, who with her brother and dancing partner, Fred Astaire, was a week-end guest at the Leeds' Long Island home at Cove Neck, had just entered the boat to take a trial spin. As Leeds started the motor, the backfire ignited gasoline seepage in the hull of the craft. The boat almost immediately was enveloped in flame.

Leeds picked up Miss Astaire, who had collapsed, and lifted her to the landing stage. Then climbing out himself he pushed the Fan Tail out into clear water. An explosion occurred a moment later.

Mrs. Leeds, the former Princess Zenia, of Greece, and Fred Astaire, were standing on the pier waiting to get into the boat when the accident occurred.

200 MILES BEHIND

By JOHN HENRY MEARS.

(Copyright, 1928.)

KAZAN, Russia, July 8.—(By Cable.)—A reception committee and thousands of the populace greeted us here on our arrival last night.

We were tendered a banquet while mechanics inspected and refueled our plane, the "City of New York," which is in perfect condition.

So far, our treatment in Russia has been wonderful. We covered 1,300 miles yesterday, but are still 700 miles behind our schedule.

We must try to make 6,000 miles during the next four days in order to catch the Empress of Russia at Yokohama. Can we do it?

I am confident that, if we get a fair break in the weather, especially near the Pacific, we shall win our goal. One trouble is that the stormy rainy season already has started along the Pacific.

I am greatly worried about Charley Collyer, the pilot, who is painfully ill with tonsilitis, but sticking to his job like a true soldier. Collyer's throat is almost closed, and he is hardly able to talk.

Another reason for speeding eastward is because we want to keep ahead of the storms chasing us according to the meteorologists here.

LAKE RATE CUT TO BE FOUGHT HERE

Coal operators of the Pittsburgh district today awaited details of the compromise agreement reported to have been reached in New York Saturday between Northern and Southern carriers on lake cargo coal freight rates. Traffic officials and coal operators have but a meager knowledge of the agreement, which came as a surprise locally.

Steps to oppose the proposed change in rates were discussed informally by executives of coal companies, and the move has been taken up with attorneys. No definite plans can be adopted until more news of the compromise is available, coal operators stated. The only certain thing, they declare, is that the change in rates, if it has been decided upon, will be bitterly contested.

"We in Pittsburgh will never agree to reducing the existing differential of 45 cents between Northern and Southern lake cargo coal shipments," declared Thomas A. Dunn, chairman of the general traffic committee of the Chamber of Commerce. "We fought for eight years against discriminatory rates and finally compromised on a 45-cent differential allowed by the Interstate Commerce Commission. The differential should be 60 cents, considering the great distance from the Southern fields to the lake. Any new schedule is subject to the approval of the commission. I am confident that body will not permit the carriers to change the differential it fixed."

The reported compromise agreement adopted by representatives of Northern and Southern carriers of lake cargo coal fixed the differential at 55 cents, effective January 1 next. Present rates, effective three weeks ago, are $1.26 from Pittsburgh and $1.71 from Southern fields, 200 to 300 miles further from Lake Erie.

The commission fixed the rates at $1.91 and $1.45 respectively. Southern roads reduced their rate to $1.71 despite the refusal of the commission to sanction it, and the Supreme Court is deliberating on an appeal in this case. Northern carriers have granted a 20-cent rebate on lake cargo coal for the Northwest under the $1.46 rate from Northern fields.

2 HELD IN KIDNAPING

STEUBENVILLE, O., July 9.—With two arrests today and four others in prospect, police expect to celar the mysterious kidnaping of Lucille Chester, 14-year-old schoolgirl of Cadiz.

Taken secretly by police in an automobile, last night, the girl pointed out half a dozen houses where she said she had been taken following her abduction Friday night after being drugged while attending a theater.

As a result of the girl's story police took into custody Charles O'Malley, 20, and Cammel Larmartice, both of Steubenville. They have descriptions of four other youths who are being sought.

Lucille left the home of her aunt, Mrs. W. H. Martin, where she had been visiting Friday night to go to a movie half a block distant. While in the theater, she says, she felt a stinging sensation in her arm and at once became dazed. When she left a man who had been seated back of her and several others followed her, she told police.

A captive nearly 24 hours, the girl says she was brought to the business district by one of her abductors, who threatened to kill her if she revealed her experiencca.

The girl collapsed and lapsed into unconsciousness after she had been found by a relative standing dazed at the entrance to a local store Saturday night. She regained consciousness and told her story last night.

HEAT WAVE KILLS 30

CHICAGO, July 9.—(AP.)—At least 30 persons died from heat or causes attributed to heat in the Midwest during the past three days when thermometers soared to new high marks for July records in many cities.

Combined with the reports of fatalities came word from agricultural centers which conflicted as to the value of the sun's excessive rays at the time, although in Kansas farmers were appreciably pleased as it helped develop the wheat crop to the extent that it is now half harvested.

The Chicago area reported a total of 14 dead; Detroit 3; Milwaukee 5; Kansas City 5, and Downstate Illinois 3.

Some relief was forecast by the government weather forecaster here after Chicago hung up a new high mark for the year. The mercury climbed to 98 degrees this afternoon within five degrees of the record of 103 for July which was set 27 years ago. Possible showers and cooler is forecast for today, but whether it will remain cool is something the weather man would not say.

From Iowa came reports of showers Sunday, and Kansas found relief in a general cooling rain. Minnesota's heat wave was broken Saturday by rain, and in some places it was accompanied by a strong wind, rain over night quenched the heat in two Dakotas.

Wisconsin, however, did not fully escape the heat, and Saturday's temperatures set new marks for Milwaukee where it touched 92 degrees, and Lacrosse and Wausau had 80 and 78 as early as 7 a. m.

Herrin, Ill., topped the list of Illinois cities with 102 degrees, and vied with Pratt, Kan., which reported the same high mark for being the warmest places in the midwest.

Des Moines, Sioux City, Omaha, Indianapolis and other cities all reported excessive heat and humidity during the week end, and hundreds hoped for promised showers for their relief.

DETECTIVES SIFT LOEWENSTEIN "DEATH"

HOAX RUMOR SPURS PROBE

International News Service.

LONDON, July 9.—Private detectives are investigating the strange disappearance of Capt. Alfred Loewenstein, noted Belgian capitalist and international banker, who mysteriously disappeared Thursday evening while ostensibly making an airplane flight from London to Brussels, it was learned today.

It is understood the investigators were retained either by persons having a heavy financial interest in the so-called Loewenstein companies or by insurance companies underwriters policies on the banker's life.

The curtain of mistery which was drawn over Loewenstein's fate when he was reported missing on Thursday night remains unpierced. Despite a search by tugs and seaplanes no trace of the body has been found in English channel.

Rumors in Berlin and Paris that Loewenstein may not be dead, are being given credence in Brussels, seat of the banker's financial operations. This was made evident when word was received that a religious memorial service, to have been held in Brussels, has been postponed pending further efforts to find the body.

Numerous fishermen on the French coast have been searching for the body along the shore hoping for a rich reward if they could find it. Dispatches from Dunkirk and Calais said that they had found neither the body nor any clothing that might have become detached from it.

Employes, who were in close contact with Loewenstein, cling to the accident theory. Mlle. Bidalon, private secretary to the financier, who was with him in the plane, and the pilot of the machine, Capt. Drew, both claim that Loewenstein entered the plane, but that he "disappeared" while it was in motion. The mechanic who was in the plane denied one report that Loewenstein had never even entered the Fokker at the Croydon Airdrome.

FILM STAR SCALDED, RALLIES

NEW YORK, July 9.—(AP.)—Miss Juanita Hansen, stage and screen actress, was reported "out of danger" at the Murray Hill Sanitarium where she was taken after being accidentally scalded in a shower bath at her hotel apartment.

The actress fell under the scalding water when she turned on the hot water full force by mistake June 23. Her face and body were seared. Plastic surgery was employed successfully by the surgeon, it was said. It will be six months or a year, however, before Miss Hansen will be able to appear before the camera again, it was said at the sanitarium.

DENVER, Col., July 9.—(AP.)—A. E. (Dick) Dickson, Colorado theater owner, was held without charge here today after he admitted killing Herbert H. Powell when he found the 19-year-old youth with his wife at the Dickson home.

Dickson told police that he had been informed that Powell had visited Mrs. Dickson several times while he was out of town. He said that after announcing he was leaving town yesterday, and had been accompanied to the station by his wife, he returned to a point near his home where he waited until he saw Powell enter.

On entering the house, Dickson said he found Powell with his wife and that during a fight over a pistol he (Dickson) carried, two shots were fired. One bullet struck Powell in the shoulder and one pierced the youth's head. Dickson said he had no intention of shooting Powell.

COOLIDGES AT CHURCH

SUPERIOR, Wis., July 9.—(AP.)—Undeterred by rainy weather, President and Mrs. Coolidge and their son John attended church at Brule as usual yesterday.

Crowds of town folk and tourists had gathered by the hundreds to catch a glimpse of the presidential family. On account of the smallness of the church, which only allowed accommodation to the local congreation, they waited outside the chapel in the showers throughout the service.

John Taylor, the blind lay preacher at Brule, chose the story of Jonah for his sermon, in which he warned against doubting the events described in the Bible.

After the service Mr. and Mrs. Coolidge and John Coolidge returned immediately to Cedar Island lodge where they spent quietly the rest of the day.

One portion of the road between Brule and the executive residence had been damaged by the rains during the night and the automobile carrying the secret service operatives following Mr. Coolidge's car sank in a bed of mud. It was soon dragged out, but the Chief Executive reached home without the usual full protection.

Hughes said Bryan attacked him and he shot merely to frighten Bryan. An inquest will be held today.

AIMEE FIBBED, INDIGNANT MOTHER ASSERTS

PROTESTS PLAN TO MORTGAGE TEMPLE

SEATTLE, Wash., July 9.—(AP.)—Mrs. Minnie Kennedy said here last night that she had sent a telegram to her daughter, Mrs. Aimee Semple McPherson, from Kelso, Wash., a few days ago, accusing Mrs. McPherson, who is in Los Angeles, of "scheming" to mortgage church properties for personal gain. She said she had a receipt from the telegraph company refuting her daughter's claim that she never received it.

"I sent the telegram to protect my own interests," Mrs. Kennedy said. "Aimee had told me in letters that she planned to mortgage Angelus Temple for a quarter of a million dollars.

"There is absolutely no reason for this. The temple is clear of debt. I knew that if she mortgaged it and then spent or lost the money that she would throw the responsibility to me, saying that I was a party to it.

"For 10 months I have been going up and down the coast doing God's holy work and maintaining silence in the face of all the things my daughter has said about me. I have tried to avoid a controversy and still hope I can do so."

MOTHER CHARGES PLOT

LOS ANGELES, July 9.—(AP.)—Mimeographed copies of a telegram sent by Mrs. Minnie Kennedy to her daughter, Aimee Semple McPherson, in which Mrs. Kennedy accused the pastor of Angelus Temple here of "scheming" to mortgage church properties for personal gain, have been received by members of the temple congregation.

Mrs. Kennedy, who is at Seattle, Wash., indicated in the telegram that "she might return to Los Angeles.

"Conditions have come to such a pass," Mrs. Kennedy's message read, "that I am coming to the conclusion that the proper steps for me to take will be to return and with evidence and information now in my possession and endeavor to completely clean and clear up the whole matter, past and present."

In another part of the telegram which Mrs. McPherson says she did not receive, but which she admitted was in the hands of members of her congregation in the form of mimeographed copies, Mrs. Kennedy discussed her daughter's denial that she told her mother about arranging to mortgage Angelus Temple.

ZEPPELIN MABEL'S HOPE

WANTS TO FLY TO U. S. IN BIG BLIMP

FRIEDRICHSHAFEN, July 9.—A scion of the Imperial Hapsburgers may be one of the first Europeans to cross the Atlantic from East to West by a Zepplin dirigible.

Archduke Wilhelm has sent his aide and Secretary Larischenko to Friedrichshafen to apply to Capt. Hugo Eckner for passage to America on the coming flight of the new super-Zeppelin as the first male air passenger westward bound.

Wilhelm is young, good-looking and unmarried, often referred to by his friends as "The Blond Duke."

DUKE IS MODERN

Of all the princes and archdukes I know in Europe—and I know most of them—Wilhelm is the most modern in his thinking and the most democratic and sensible. He realizes that the day of monarchies is past, and aspires to become a business man.

The archduke served in the war with distinction and tried to become a sort of Pilsudski of Ukrania as commander and leader of Ukrania's legions fighting against Poland and Russia for the independence of their country. His father is one of the wealthiest and noblest in Poland, being regarded as the legitimate aspirant to the Polish throne, but now too old, and an invalid.

Wilhelm lives near Paris, in his villa, during the summer.

MABEL WANTS TO COME

It also is reported here that Mabel Boll, reputed "Queen of Diamonds," is vying with Lady Drummond Hay, of London, to be the first woman to cross the Atlantic westward by applying for passage on the Zeppelin through a friend here.

Eckener is as yet unable to make up his mind as to whether he will take any passengers on his first trip. The new Zeppelin, the start of which is being delayed by a small defect in its motor, will be christened today.

With a bottle of "liquid air," Countess Brandenstein, daughter of the inventor, will name the super-air liner after her father, Count Zeppelin.

MEDICS INDORSE C. OF C. HEALTH DRIVE

The health committee of the Pittsburgh Chamber of Commerce recently conceived the idea that the best service it could render to the community would be to start a movement for periodical health examinations.

The idea was to carry on a campaign to bring the vital importance of such examinations home to the minds of people in general. The attention of the Allegheny County Medical Society was directed to the matter by a communication from R. W. Elton, secretary of the community affairs division of the Chamber, and in the discussion which followed, it cropped out that while physicians are busy day and night safeguarding the health of their patients, they are as a class neglectful of their own health and perhaps more in need of periodical examinations than any other group in the community.

As the result of this frank discussion the board of directors of the medical society not only gave a unanimous vote of approval to the growing public demand for periodic physical examination of the apparently healthy, but also strongly urged the society's hundreds of members to submit themselves to such examinations after carefully filling in a blank form furnished by the Chamber of Commerce, in which the signer gives complete information in regard to his conditions of work or employment, personal habits, amusements, home life, family health history, if any, and so forth.

The physicians of Pittsburgh now are going to one another and taking their own medicine in the sense that each of them is letting a brother physician go over him thoroughly with the purpose of detecting any danger signals of the sort that come to light under a thorough laboratory examination and at once taking steps to head off trouble.

The Homeopathic Medical Society of Allegheny County also has indorsed the periodical health examination propaganda.

Having got the doctors aroused to their personal need of periodic examination as the only genuine health insurance, the Chamber of Commerce is now turning its attention to its own 6,000 members in an effort to persuade them to fill out the health examination form and then do their best to contract the periodical health examination habit.

WED "SECOND" TIME

GOLDEN WEDDING YEAR

Wed 50 years. Mr. and Mrs. J. F. McShane, 100 Baldwin road, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary by repeating the ceremony at St. Phillip's Church, Crafton, before a large crowd of children, relatives and friends. Three sons and 10 grandchildren attended the ceremony, performed by the Rev. William Kealty. A sister of the groom, Mrs. Alice McCollough, 5440 Ellsworth avenue, who was present at the wedding in Delphos, O., 50 years ago, was a guest of honor. The bride, 72, was Catherine A. Phelan, Delphos, before her marriage. Mr. McShane, 77, was born where the Century Building now stands in Pittsburgh.

STRIKERS CITE DEMOCRATIC PLEDGES

The legislative history of the coal strike in Western Pennsylvania was reviewed yesterday by labor leaders, who addressed several thousand striking miners gathered at California, Pa. The speakers also called attention to the promises of the Democratic party to bring about legislative reforms to stabilize the coal industry.

The speakers were Philip Murray, international vice president of the United Mine Workers; P. T. Fagan, president of District No. 5 of the organization, and William Haynes and Harry Wadsworth, district organizers.

The speakers also ridiculed the conference called for September 9-16 by the Save-the-Union committee. This rebel branch of striking miners is planning to break away from the United Mine Workers in an effort to establish a new union. The convention is scheduled to be held in Pittsburgh and calls were sent out yesterday to delegates.

MINERS SEEK FUND TO FIGHT IN COURTS

The National Miners' Relief Committee, which advocates mass picketing and violation of injunctions in the coal strike, plans a vigorous nation-wide campaign the week of July 22-29 to raise funds to supply legal aid to pickets and other strikers who get into trouble with the police. The International Labor Defense Association is co-operating in the movement. Money will also be solicited for the relief of destitute strikers' families.

Hundreds of cases in which strikers have been convicted of violating injunctions, including the case of Anthony Minerich, chairman of the committee, will be appealed to the higher courts if the drive brings sufficient funds.

An automobile caravan to the mining camps next Saturday and a conference in Pittsburgh next Sunday will be preliminaries to the campaign.

REAL ESTATE

An 11-room brick residence and garage at the southwest corner of Black and Chislett streets, Tenth Ward, has been sold by J. Young to I. Chernoff. The lot fronts 142 feet on Chislett street and 82 feet on Black street.

In Mt. Lebanon, a six-room brick and shingle dwelling, on 40x110 feet at 444 Kenmont avenue, has been sold for E. M. Arnold to K. K. McClaren for $10,500. The deal was made through F. J. Breen, of the South Hills Realty Company.

O. L. Bartlett, vice president of Perfect Laundries, Inc., has denied the report that the Eppley interests are concerned in the new laundry plant which is being erected at Lexington and Meade streets, Homewood. The report was founded on the fact that R. L. Moseley, who is treasurer of the Pittsburgh Hotels Corporation, is president of Perfect Laundries, Inc.

A brick house on 25x100 feet in Knox avenue, Thirtieth Ward, has been sold by Sarah Ellen Shepard to Wesley Holland.

A property containing 50x112 feet in West Liberty avenue, Nineteenth Ward, has been sold by W. W. Lapham to R. H. Uhlinger.

One man will patrol the district, reporting to the station every 15 minutes, while the additional men will remain at the station on reserve duty, awaiting emergency calls. Riot guns and night sticks will be carried in side cars, which will also be used for additional policemen.

Heretofore only two motorcycle policemen have patroled the streets at night. Supt. Walsh issued instructions that the new squad shall also be on the alert to detect speeders and other automobile law violators. The squad will patrol all traffic arteries after murders or robberies where criminals are fleeing in automobiles.

Tom Mix to Make Photoplay Dealing With Old Pony Express Days; Sharon Lynn Is Heroine

By REGINA CREWE

(Copyright, 1928, King Features Syndicate, Inc.)

HOLLYWOOD, July 9.

"THE GIRL OF THE GOLDEN WEST" is to have a big brother—or a little one—all depending on how Tom Mix's new film turns out. It is titled "Son of the Golden West," and harks back to the days when folks put pony express stamps on their letters in place of airmail stamps. It looks as though James Horne will be the director. Sharon Lynn has been signed as the "glorifier."

June, Collyer and the "Chasing Through Europe" Company leave for the other side on July 15 to make a trip through no fewer than seven countries. So June will be quite an authority on "furrin parts" by the time she gets back to Hollywood.

The company will get a chance to take in the Olympic games in Amsterdam, and will also get glimpses of England, Ireland, Wales, France, Germany, Italy and Switzerland. Why join the Navy to see the world, when the movies pay so much better.

Speaking of Europe, Ramon Novarro declares to one and all that he is quite crazy about it and proposes to begin saving his pennies at once for another trip. Ramon will need quite a large bank, as his recent vacation stood him somewhere in the neighborhood of $30,000. Which should be sufficient to give him an equity in a couple of Venetian canals or an Alp or two. Ramon is popular on the Metro lot, and always has a crowd around listening to his experiences. He begins work on "Gold Braid" in a day or two.

Despite the hold-up on production caused by Dolores Del Rio's illness, Director Edwin Carewe has finally completed "Revenge," which will be her next United Artists release. It will require several weeks to cut the film, and then there will be a definite decision as to Dolores' next vehicle.

With only a week's respite, Betty Compson will leave "The Docks of New York" and embark on "Scarlet Seas." "Docks," you remember, is the current George Bancroft film, while "Scarlet Seas" is the title of Richard Barthelmess' next. After that Betty may have a while to inspect the glories of the foothill estate she shares as Mrs. James Cruze. The Cruzes, by the way, are paragons of Hollywood hospitality. They have a real open house, and it is thronged with cinema celebs every week-end.

Claire Windsor has been busy taking tests for the leading feminine role in the new Fairbanks production, which is to be a sequel to "The Three Musketeers." The latest title is "For All Eternity," which, you'll agree, is a long, long time.

Now that all the billing troubles for "The Love Song" are straightened out, and Bill Boyd and Lupe Velez are both satisfied—or at least I hope they are—Lowell Sherman has been added to the cast. He will be the "Menace," which rumbles the drums so that "The Love Song" may not be too saccharine.

STRANDED GIRLS SENT BACK TO MAINE HOMES

UNIONTOWN, Pa., July 9.—Their dream of becoming movie actresses shattered, Betty Duffey and Doris Reed, high school girls of Bangor, Me., have been returned home, thanks to the generosity of police and the Salvation Army. The girls were stranded here en route to Hollywood and had been held, awaiting word from their parents.

HOW TO KEEP COOL -:- RUSSIAN -:- LOCATION LIMOUSINE

Clara Bow may have an effective way of dressing for hot weather, but we think we'd prefer a screen to that grill in case a hungry mosquito were roaming about.

Madame Baklanova, formerly of the Moscow Art Theater, whose work in "Three Sinners" and "The Street of Sin" has won her a contract.

Colleen Moore uses this method of travel between Hollywood and El Toro, Cal., for location scenes for her new picture, "Lilac Time," which has a French war setting.

CONNEAUT GETS MUSIC FETE

A music festival, under the auspices of the Festival Chorus of the Middle West, opens tonight in the Temple of Music, Conneaut Lake Park. The festival will last a week. The various festival programs will feature a chorus of 1,000 voices, 11 well-known solists and the Boston Women's Symphony Orchestra, under the leadership of Ethel Leginska.

Thursday will be observed as Pittsburgh day at the festival. Lyda Neebson, young Pittsburgh soprano, who has won international reputation, will be featured. Earl Mitchell will be the accompanist.

The presentation of "Faust" in concert form will mark the opening of the festival tonight. Programs thereafter will be held twice daily—afternoon and evening.

Davis Is Closed; To Reopen In Fall

For the first time in many seasons the Davis has closed for the summer. It will reopen with the same policy of Keith-Albee vaudeville and first run photoplays early in the fall.

"The Davis is the only high-class vaudeville house in the country that has remained open during the heated term," said Earl L. Crabb, managing director of the Stanley Company of America, which operates the Davis, "but because of the increasing difficulty of getting the better headline acts to appear during July and August, we have deemed it advisable to close the theater until such time as they are available."

The theater will be renovated and redecorated during the summer. Mr. Crabb will go to New York shortly to contract for the autumn.

ALVIN AND PITT NEW SEASON ARRANGED

John B. Reynolds, general manager for the Shubert Theatrical Company in Pittsburgh, has just returned from a visit to New York, where he has been arranging for next season's attractions in the Pitt and Alvin.

Mr. Reynolds says it is the intention of the Shubert Theatrical Company to make extensive improvements at the Pitt following the engagement of the George Sharp Players in this house. The stage will be entirely remodeled and a new switchboard of the latest design will be installed. The boxes will be torn out and new floors and new chairs will replace the present ones. The auditorium will be entirely redecorated. It is said the Shubert company will spend about $250,000 on alterations in the Pitt.

Attractions booked to play in this house next season include: Madge Kennedy in "Paris Bound," "Bachelors Father," "Skidding," "Say When," "The Skull," Helen Hayes in "Coquette," Grace George, Jane Cowl, "Burlesque," "Excess Baggage," "The Silent House," "Trial of Mary Dugan" and Rex Cherryman, George Arliss and Alice Brady.

The Alvin, after overhauling, redecorating, etc., will play big musical shows. They include "Grand Street Follies," "Good News," "The Passing Show," "The Connecticut Yankee," "Sunny Days," Mary Eaton and Oscar Shaw in "The Five O'Clock Girl," "The New Moon," "Good Boy," Al Jolson, American Opera Company, "Present Arms," "The Desert Song," Winter Garden attractions, Greenwich Village Follies, "Rain or Shine," with Joe Cook; Mitzi in "Madcap Princess," White's Follies, "Golden Dawn," San Carlo Opera Company and "My Maryland."

Charlie Murray Policeman Again

Charlie Murray, First National's comedy ace, has returned to Hollywood after a vacation spent in the East, and is preparing to begin his next picture, "Do Your Duty." It will present the story of a city policeman and will be directed by William Beaudine, who directed Murray and George Sidney in "The Life of Riley."

Nobile's Take-Off Is News Reel Feature

Exclusive motion pictures of the take-off of Nobile's giant dirigible, Italia, for the North Pole—the trip from which it never returned—are being shown at leading motion picture theaters by M-G-M News and International Newsreel. The pictures are the only ones made of the departure and of the momentous events leading up to the departure of Nobile and his crew in the Italia on the final, disastrous flight.

These pictures were made by Robert Hartman, manager of the Berlin bureau of the Hearst newsreels. Hartman went to Kings Bay, Spitzbergen, when Nobile and the Italia left Italy. He was the only newsreel cameraman in Kings Bay at the time of the departure of Nobile for the North Pole and immediately preceding and following that fateful event.

Hartman placed his pictures aboard the only steamer leaving Kings Bay in more than a month, which took them to Oslo. From there they were carried by airplane through Norway, Sweden, Germany, Holland and to France and placed aboard the Ile de France, which brought them to New York.

Vilma and Ronald In Different Pictures

Shooting two pictures simultaneously for the first time in his history as an independent producer, Samuel Goldwyn this week began work on his picturization of Joseph Conrad's novel, "The Rescue," before "The Awakening," Vilma Banky's first individual starring vehicle, is completed. "The Rescue" is starring Ronald Colman independently, for the first time, and it marks the initial appearance in American films of Lily Damita, the French picture actress whom Mr. Goldwyn recently imported from Europe.

Anne Warrington, whom oldtime playgoers will remember with Richard Mansfield, Henry Miller, William Faversham and Henrietta Crosman, has been signed to make her first appearance on the screen in the role of the Mother Superior in "The Awakening."

Laska Winters has been chosen for the part of Immada, the Malay princess, in "The Rescue."

MacLean Seeking New Leading Woman

Douglas MacLean and Al Christie are busy hunting a leading woman for the former in "The Carnation Kid," soon to be made by Christie for Paramount release. The selection will probably be made from among the players now under contract with Christie comedies.

Among the eligibles are: Frances Lee, now being featured in a series of comedies called "Confessions of a Chorus Girl"; Nancy Dover, Bobby Vernon's leading woman; Jane Laurell, Joan Marquis, Marguerite Andrus and Winnie Law.

The Christie studio has supplied rich finds for other producers. Raquel Torres, just one of the Christie girls, was recently given the lead in "Southern Skies," made in the South Sea Islands. Doris Dawson has already played opposite Richard Barthelmess. Ann Christy stepped from the side of the bewhiskered Jack Duffy in Christie comedies to the side of the begoggled Harold Lloyd in "Speedy."

Footlight Star Jannings' Heroine

Ruth Chatterton, widely known star of the legitimate stage, who has been playing in Los Angeles and other Pacific Coast cities for the past year or more, has just been signed by Paramount to appear in Emil Jannings' next starring picture, "Sins of the Fathers."

Miss Chatterton was starred on Broadway in such plays as "Come Out of the Kitchen," "Daddy Long Legs," "Mary Rose," "The Man With a Load of Mischief," and in a revival of Barrie's "The Little Minister."

CAST INCLUDES LOCAL BOY

Clifford W. Edge, a Pittsburgh boy, will be a member of The Nixon Players, playing his first part with "East Is West" in the Nixon, beginning tonight. Born in London, England, he has lived in Pittsburgh for 10 years. His parents live in Oakmont. He is a graduate of Schenley High School.

Gus Forbes will have to sacrifice his mustache in the interests of art when he essays the role of the German professor in "The Music Master" in the Pitt, beginning tonight.

Eduoard Bourdet's dramatic play, "The Captive," will open in the Gayety tonight. Matinees are scheduled for Wednesday and Saturday. Marcia Byron heads the cast and she is supported a company, including Vernon Steel.

Mabel Kroman, of the George Sharp Players, is supervising rehearsals of her own play, which will be presented in the Pitt next week under the title of "It Happened in Pittsburgh."

Opening Monday night, July 16, The Nixon Players will present the "The Best People," by David Gray and Avery Hapgood, in the Nixon, where it originally played under another title.

LAD'S SKULL FRACTURED AS PLAYER'S BAT SLIPS

WARREN, Pa., July 9.—Struck by a baseball bat while watching an amateur game here, Richard Giegerich, 12, of Clarendon, suffered a fractured skull. His uncle, Ray Poppleton, had struck at a pitched ball and the bat flew from his grasp.

Camilla Horn in Barrymore Drama

"Conquest" is the title of John Barrymore's third United Artists picture, the Ernst Lubitsch production in which Camilla Horn again will appear opposite the star of "Tempest."

Miss Horn is returning from Germany to New York and Hollywood, and production of "Conquest" will be begun toward the end of August.

The story now being prepared is an original one, not a film version of a stage play. "Conquest," like "Tempest," will be a modern story.

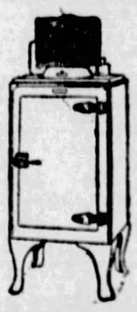
A Musical History of Refrigeration

A highly entertaining radio hour, presenting a musical pageant of the history of refrigeration from the earliest times to the present, will be broadcast by the OCHILTREE ELECTRIC CO., 505 Liberty Avenue, through station KDKA at 9:30 o'clock tonight.

The story of refrigeration is the story of civilization ... from the days of the caveman's discovery of cool caverns for preserving his "kill," to the last word in modern electrical achievement, the General Electric Refrigerator.



One of the dramatic stages in the development of refrigeration is illustrated above. It shows the soldiers of Alexander the Great placing kegs of wine in deep ditches to be packed with snow brought down from the mountains by slaves. The cooled wines were served to his troops at the feasts which followed their victorious battles.

The musical pageant has been carefully arranged. It combines vocal and orchestral offerings.

Be sure to tune in on this delightful radio hour.

INEZ B. O'DONNELL

Miss Inez B. O'Donnell, East End, has sailed on the SS. Minnekahda for Enrope. She expects to spend two months traveling on the continent.

MRS. JAMES O. ROTH

Mrs. James O. Roth, before her marriage not long ago, was Miss Gretchen Emmerling. She is a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Watt, Greensburg.

MARGARET GWENDOLYN KOCH

Miss Margaret Gwendolyn Koch, whose engagement to Howard Townsend Bongardt has been announced by her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry A. Koch, Sheridan avenue.

HEAT HASTENS CITY EXODUS

THERE is no doubt about it, midsummer and all its social lethargy is well upon us. You have only to see the closed homes out in the East End and in the Ridge avenue section of the North Side to be aware of that. And certainly the warm weather during the past few days would drive Pittsburghers out of town even if they hadn't made their plans some time ago.

But first, let me get away from the subject of traveling just long enough to tell you about an interesting engagement that is announced today, and involves a popular Pittsburgh girl and a Sewickley Valley man. It is that of Catherine Longenecker and James Bennett Walker, son of the junior Hay Walkers, of Edgeworth. Catherine, you know, is a daughter of Mrs. Ralph Longenecker, of St. James street.

And another bit of news concerns a dinner which the Benjamin R. B. Townsends, of "Fairway," Sewickley Heights, gave Saturday night in the Allegheny Country Club. They entertained for the Lewis A. Parks, of "Hillside," Sewickley Heights, who were married in February. You remember, of course, that Mrs. Park was Frances Schoen.

NOW, about these travelers—did you know that the junior Julian Kennedys and their youngsters, of Thorn street, Sewickley, have gone to Sodus Point, N. Y. They have taken a cottage there for the entire summer, I understand. And Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Cullum and their daughter, Mollie, of East drive, Sewickley, with the Allan Cullums, are at their farm, "Riveredge," Reading. I hear, too, that the Ralph Harbisons' two elder sons, E. Harris Harbison and Samuel P. Harbison II, are sailing this week on the Majestic to spend the summer abroad. They will go with Ivy Lee, of New, I believe.

Mr. and Mrs. John Hartwell Hillman, Jr., of Fifth avenue, have gone to Beaumaris, Canada, where they have a cottage, and among others at Beaumaris are Mr. and Mrs. George Pearson Rhodes, of Wilkins avenue. Going out of town a little later are the William L. Rowes, of Kentucky avenue, who will spend August at Bay Head, N. J. Also Dr. and Mrs. Frederick Morris, of Pitcairn place, who are going to leave late this month to spend some time at Swampscott.

Mr. and Mrs. Wenman Armstrong Hicks, of the Cathedral Mansions, are in Naples now, I hear. They are spending a couple of months on the continent, and expect to sail from France late in August to return home. In Europe, too, are the Samuel Grant Coopers and their sons, George and Richard Cooper, of Beaver street, Sewickley. They have gone to spend two months touring through Norway, Sweden and Iceland. And the Donald Bakewells' of Centennial avenue, Sewickley, have opened their summer home at Cobourg, Canada.

Also at their summer home are the T. H. B. McKnights and their daughter, Lelia, of Sewickley. They left early last week for Nantucket. Up at their summer place in Canada, too, are Mrs. Wallace Hurtte Rowe, with her daughter, Eleanor, and her son, Wallace Hurtte Rowe, Jr. They left on Thursday, I understan, and will be at "Cottesmore Hall, at Cobourg, until fall. Another daughter and her husband, the Robert Broddy Duggans, of Toronto, with their children, will be Mrs. Rowe's guests during the summer.

A VERY small wedding of last week was that of Sally Rawstorne, daughter of the Charles Duren Rawstornes, of Denniston avenue, and John Curry Bane, Jr., son of Mrs. John C. Bane, of South Atlantic avenue. Only the immediate families witnessed the ceremony, which was performed on Thursday in the Fourth Presbyterian Church by the Rev. W. L. Ritter. The young Banes are motoring in the Adirondacks.

Th. Ladies of Charity of the Rosella Foundling Asylum and Maternity Hospital, Cliff and Manila streets, will hold a lawn party Wednesday afternoon and night on the grounds of their park.

Miss Mathilda O'Hara is general chairman, assisted by Mrs. Charles Lawrence, Sr. Mrs. Robert Walsh is chairman for the country store, and there will be a refreshment booth managed by Mrs. Charles Lawrence, Jr., Mrs. O. M. Sharbaugh, Miss I. Peden and Miss Katherine Gallagher. Bridge, euchre, "500," Old Maid and Bingo will be played.

OAKLAND CHAPTER NO. 369, O. E. S., will hold a card party Friday night in its hall in Fifth avenue, Oakland. Mrs. Mary V. Johnston is worthy matron of the chapter.

FRIENDSHIP, Robert Swan and Franklin chapters, Order of the Eastern Star, will hold their annual boat ride tomorrow night on the Homer Smith. Mrs. Phoebe Baker and Etta T. Smith are chairmen.

ROBERT SWAN CHAPTER, No. 293, O. E. S., will hold a moonlight boat ride tomorrow night on the Homer Smith. The boat will leave the wharf at 8:30 o'clock, and there will be dancing and cards. Mrs. Ursula King is worthy matron.

THE marriage of Miss Margaret Sarah Kennerdell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. James B. Kennerdell, of Kittanning, and Robert Wilson Snodgrass, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Snodgrass, Jr., of Home avenue, Avalon, will be solemnized Tuesday night, July 17, at 7:30 o'clock in the First Presbyterian Church of Kittanning by the Rev. A. E. Driggers. Miss Dorothy Taylor will be her cousin's maid of honor, and Mrs. James Donald McCutcheon, of Bellevue, sister of the bridegroom, will be matron of honor. The bridesmaids will be Miss Josephine Wilson, Miss Margaret Gault and Miss Carolyn Titzell, of Kittanning. George Wilson Snodgrass will be his brother's best man, and the ushers will include Dr. James M. Campbell, Dr. James M. Mullen, David Snodgrass, Paul Coggins and James D. McCutcheon, of Bellevue, and James H. Kennerdell, brother of the bride. A reception in th Kittanning Country Club will follow the ceremony. Mrs. Harry W. Allison will entertain tomorrow for Miss Kennerdell, and the rehearsal dinner will be given next Monday night by Miss Josephine Wilson. Among others who have entertained for the prospective bride are Miss Gault and Miss Titzell, Mrs. James T. McCullough, Mrs. Chauncey Anderson, Miss Martha Mateer, Mrs. Craig McKee and Miss Margaret McKee and Miss Dorothy Taylor.

THE marriage of Mrs. Grace H. Donges to Dr. David R. Sumstine took place at the home of the bride, North Euclid avenue, at noon on Saturday. The ceremony was performed by Dr. George W. Englar, pastor of Bethany Lutheran Church, East End. The immediate relatives of the couple were the only guests present. Mr. and Mrs. Sumstine have left for a trip to the Pacific Coast, Alaska and the Canadian Rockies, and after September 1 will be at home in North Euclid avenue. The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Charles Lykens, Paul Lykens, Grace Lykens and Kathryn Magee, all of Philadelphia.

How To Be Beautiful

by Maria Jeritza

The Art of Looking Cool

HOW refreshing it is to look at a person who appears cool and comfortable and dainty on a hot day! Immediately the heat seems more endurable, just as it does when in a darkened, ventilated theater we behold on the screen Arctic scenes of ice and snow.

You cannot look alluring, charming or beautiful in summer unless you look cool. You cannot look and seem cool unless you actually are cool. For while you are feeling feverish with the heat, unhappy and uncomfortable, your skin will reflect this condition with its moist shine and your entire expression and manner will betray your discomfort.

In order to feel cool the prime necessity is to think coolness and poise. Decide that you will do all you can to adjust yourself to the heat, then quietly go about your work, without confusion of thought or worry about the temperature.

Dress has become so simplified nowadays that it should help us bear heat and every other condition gracefully and good-humoredly.

In hot weather the daytime costume may well consist of a cool, loose, tub-silk frock, chiffon stockings, low-cut sandal pumps and just one combination undergarment, unless the dress is sheer and calls for a slip.

It is inadvisable to wear round garters as a rule, for they may interfere with circulation and spoil the shape of the legs and knees. But on hottest days it can do no harm to discard the garter girdle and, for the sake of coolness, hold up stockings with round garters. Of course a loose brassiere and girdle should always be worn by a woman inclined to superfluous fat.

In the country, sleeveless tennis frocks, tennis shoes and a cardigan jacket solve the heat problem until it is time to dress in the late afternoon. The important thing is to wear only fresh, immaculately clean clothes. The ideal would be daily change and laundering of underwear and hosiery.

Wear your hair more simply in hot weather and avoid use of the curling-iron. The summer bath should be tepid—just warm enough to cleanse, not hot enough to stimulate perspiration. A few degrees higher than the temperature of the bathroom is about right.

If you keep your thoughts calm, and overcome constipation, you should not be troubled by odorous prespiration. The use of shields is inadvisable except when strictly necessary. Some women make use of certain preparations on the market for checking perspiration and report them satisfactory. The alternative is to bathe daily, sponge the body, including the arm-pits, with eau de cologne or toilet water after each bath, shave under the arms, wear sleeveless frocks when they are appropriate and launder the underwear daily.

Makeup should be light in summer, else it will mingle with perspriation, sink into the pores and choke them. When your face is hot and shiny, try sponging it with absorbent cotton dipped into the following mixture:

Rosewater, 5½ ounces; alcohol, ½ ounce; boric acid, ½ dram; oil of lavender, a few drops.

Wipe off the excess of this cleansing tonic, then powder lightly.

Salad luncheons are advisable in hot weather. A salad sandwich on whole wheat or rye bread with frosted chocolate or a glass of buttermilk, a glass of lemonade, or even a cup of hot tea, is cooling and nourishing.

All windows should be open and screened night and day. Draw your bed out where it gets the air. Swim or exercise and walk each day.

With the aid of your common sense and power of adjustment you can keep yourself looking and feeling cool and attractive straight through the dogs days of July and August.

SUE CAROL

BEAUTY'S GREATEST CHARM FOUND

Film Stars must have exquisitely smooth skin, says Hollywood

LOS ANGELES, CAL.—Whether petite and dark, or tall and of the coloring gentlemen prefer, a woman's chief charm is a smooth skin, say the leading film directors. Stars of widely varying types all have in common this one quality of a flawless skin. Carl Laemmle, Jr., Universal director, says, "There's amazing allure in beautiful, smooth skin—'studio skin'—it's the one charm every star must have. Make-up is no help under Klieg lights in a close-up, the skin must be exquisite."

Nine out of ten stars in Hollywood are using Lux Toilet Soap for their priceless skin. This new soap is made by the renowned method perfected in France and used for her finest toilet soaps.

Sue Carol, young Universal player and one of the 1928 "Wampas Baby Stars," says, "Lux Toilet Soap leaves my skin gloriously smooth." All the big film studios have placed it in their dressing rooms as the official soap—an interesting evidence of how important the industry considers smooth skin. Lux Toilet Soap is manufactured by Lever Bros. Co., Cambridge, Massachusetts.

The CONSTANT FLAME

Emily's House Completed, She Invites Kingdon For Dinner

WHAT HAS HAPPENED SO FAR

Emily Day and Kitten are daughters of a worker in the Rossiter factory. Both are prevented by poverty from mingling with the socially elect of the little town. Emily had made an ideal of Kent Rossiter. Mary Nolan, whose father keeps a "speakeasy," is devoted to her. Mrs. Frances Haiden, a wealthy interior decorator, takes an interest in her. She gets a job with Mrs. Haiden. Kitten, Emily's sister, is going with a wild crowd and is running close to danger. Emily goes into partnership with Mrs. Haiden, Stella tells her that Skeets has deserted her. Kitten discovers that Ted is a chauffeur instead of a millionaire. Stella and Skeets are married.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

MRS. BRIGGS came limping over towards evening. She had dropped a flatiron on her foot and all her troubles were multiplied.

"You'll have heard," she began, "as how the young gentleman will be made much. Sure, they'll all do some steppin' with the likes of him in office."

"I'd not trust him too far," Agnes objected. "They're alike, all the rich ones."

"An' there's where you're wrong, begging your pardon, Mrs. Day, dear. That one's a good boy as ever an' he'll show 'em a thing or two. Didn't I hear him talkin' only the other night how this must stand an' that must go an' divil take who gets in the way. Like his father an' his grandfather, rest their souls, before him, the young fella is. Blood will tell."

It gave Emily a thrill for once, hearing that. She wanted to get by herself and hold the idea close to her heart; Kent so fine, so unafraid, able to do anything. Kent the magnificent—aristocrat of courage! And once he had kissed her, told her she was sweet . . .

But she didn't go away, for she hoped Mrs. Briggs might tell more about him.

"And is the sister as nice?" Agnes inquired.

The housekeeper threw up her hands. "There, now! Ah, the creature! Her but a few months married and never a decent word for her man, mind you, an' him pickin' up an' runnin' here an' there till you're askin' did he leave her for good this time or what.

"There's a one is bringing her old father to the grave in sorrow with her goin's-on. Sittin' like a brazen thing with her skirts over her knees an' her cigarets, a-makin' eyes at the Wickert, bad luck to him!"

There was a crash and Kitten bent over the sink. The glass she had been filling at the tap had slipped from her hand and shattered.

She scraped up the splinters clumsily; presently she slipped out of the room.

Emily kept wondering about it; trying to find a reason for her sister being upset by the story of Avis. She remembered the shock she, herself, had felt when through another of Mrs. Briggs' stories she realized what a sham was Avis' marriage.

Perhaps Kitten, who looked up to women like Avis, was feeling the hurt of a broken ideal. Sad that would be with the little sister's unbridled nature.

She followed Kitten, expecting to find her weeping in her room. But as she closed the door she saw the red head, pressed to the telephone.

Kitten whispered something and jerked up the receiver. Her eyes were green as she fled upstairs.

CHAPTER XXXIX.

THE sunroom was finished now and it was even prettier, Emily told herself, than she had expected. All light and blithesomeness, it seemed always the soft edge of morning within those glowing walls.

There was a winding thread of green in the cushions and hangings; the joyous green of early summer. And the green rugs she had placed about were like woodland moss on the polished floor. A happy room. Even Agnes was pleased with it.

Kingdon Coles was invited. He would come a little early so they could have an hour in the sun room before they went downstairs for dinner. An hour watching the light slide to the far edge of the river and linger on the Tarrytown hills as the sun dropped down the west.

And perhaps if he asked her while they sat there she would set a wedding day. This thought frightened her a little; still there was no putting it off. Feel differently, probably, with everything settled and Agnes woe over.

Agnes hadn't said much about Marty lately, but then he hadn't been dropping in so frequently since he'd been in Judge Morrow's office.

She came home at noon and began to make preparations. There was to be Maryland chicken for dinner after a recipe Frances Haiden had given her, and she had to bring this to readiness as well as the dressing for the salad. Agnes did not approve the dressing.

"But you'll eat a little of it, Muz darling? It would look so funny if you didn't.

"You care much what this man thinks, Emmy? I'm a plain old woman; too plain for their grand ways."

"Oh, you're not! Nothing too grand for you, dear. I want you to have everything."

"Everything's not for some mind the time your poor father—"

"Dearest, please don't think about that. Just talk of other things tonight, won't you? Just this, and that the way people do."

"Ah, well," with a sigh.

Supposing Agnes should start telling King of Steve and her early days with him. Emily could imagine his polite interest the ennui behind it.

"But I shouldn't feel so about him," she thought. "The man I'm going to marry—why, I should wish him to meet my people and see my home. Yet I'm all on edge. I don't know—can't understand—"

She swept and dusted the living room; there was a moment when she considered taking away the crocheted tidies. But a bit of independence stopped this.

"If he doesn't like me in spite of those he doesn't care enough to marry me. Going to all this bother, feeling so—but I suppose most girls do the same. Natural to want to appear your best."

She had told him the way to the house. "I live on the Hill—" blushing a little. But he didn't know regional distinctions in Lyall; that meant nothing.

Shortly after five she expected him and put on her prettiest blue frock and brushed her hair till it shone like a nimbus. Then she sat in the sunroom to wait.

It was half past six when she heard his car turning into the street. By this time she was in a fever of nerves; the sunset was all over and their bright hour vanished. Besides the dinner would be spoiled; Agnes had been keeping it warm to the very limit of endurance. They would have to eat first and sit in the sunroom afterward; she tried to comfort herself with the thought that her lights there gave a lovely glow.

All of this rushed from her mind at sight of the blank incredulity in his face.

"So this is the place! Came up here once, but thought I was mistaken." He put out his hand, still uncertainly. "How are you?"

She led him into the living room and he sat down before the crayon portrait. She saw him turn his eyes, a look of pain sweeping his face. When Agnes came and he executed his low, foreign bow over her hand, Emily was acutely conscious of her mother's embarrassment.

He was elaborately courteous. He went far out of the way to make conversation and Emily was grateful for this. She'd have been willing to have listened to one of Agnes' reminiscences so tense did the evening become before the dinner was over.

She could think of nothing to say. Something, she knew, was wrong, but what it was she couldn't guess. Now and then she caught the Viking eyes fixed on her in a piercing scrutiny; always it sent the red up her throat. Once she felt herself growing hysterical as Kitten gave her a little grimace.

Agnes refused the salad, but that didn't matter. She could eat none of it herself. She looked at the terrible golden-oak buffet—Steve had bought it years back and it had strange little shelves and dust-catching curlicues of wood—and wished she was dead.

Eventually Agnes said the thing Emily someway knew was coming. "I've a good daughter in Emmy, Mr. Coles. She's taken care of us since her father died."

"Yes indeed. She's a brave little kid."

It was sincere enough but Emily's strained imagination found a note of condescension. Certainly King's usual loverliness was absent as he followed her into the living room while Agnes and Kitten gathered up the dishes.

It didn't seem worth while to take him up to the sunroom after that. And when he remembered, all at once, that he must leave early she rose quickly and walked with him to the door.

He gave her a hasty kiss and she stood there in the dark listening to the sound of his motor growing faint down the street. Then she crept upstairs and sat with her head on the rounded wicker table and all the undraped windows of the sunroom stared at her like curious eyes.

Such a happy thing she had planned—and now the place held only bewilderment.

It wasn't that she felt a great love for King. But he'd seemed to care—to want her so. And he came like a stranger and scrutinized her across the table.

What was he thinking when he did that? What was there about this she failed to comprehend? "Why?" she kept asking herself quite as she had done when she was a very little girl. "Why?"

'INDIANS'' CAPTIVE DIES OF BURNS

WARREN, Pa., July 9.—Little Joseph Font's valiant fight for life is ended. He died of burns suffered while playing "burned at the stake" with friends Monday.

The 12-year-old boy was wrapped in crepe paper, imitating an Indian headdress, and prepared for a playful sacrificial rite by other boys of his own age.

They were blacking his face with a burned cork when the paper accidentally became ignited. Joseph fell to the ground, screaming, and his playmates, frightened, ran away.

PACKARD MAKES PRICE CUT

The Packard Motor Car Company today announced a price reduction of $300 on all models of the Packard Six. This reduction is effective immediately, the Packard Motor Company of Pittsburgh, distributor here, has been advised.

These reductions in prices, the announcement states, have been made because the factory expects to introduce in the late summer new cars which, though identical in size and similar in appearance, will have enough mechanical changes to classify them as new models. These new cars will be priced higher than the present cars were before this reduction, the announcement continued.

BUGS BAER Says

(Copyright, 1928.)
By ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

WITH the New York thermometers popping corn around 90 degrees it will soon be hot enough to turn on the subway fans.

ARTHUR "BUGS" BAER.

We will always feel sorry for Nobile who was rescued from a solid mountain of ice. Nobile was saved but he lost the iceberg.

But we will always be indebted to the medical profession which tells you how to keep cool. The health authorities publish their frapped advice on billboards which are pasted on telegraph poles and blank walls.

In order to read this frigid glossary you are compelled to stand out in the hot sun.

The most dangerous of all hot weather complaints is the summer cold. An ounce of prevention is worth a pound of advice and a pound of advice ain't worth anything.

A summer cold is one that you failed to get rid of the winter before.

It is a temporary indisposition that takes years to cure. Once you get it right it is dangerous to take off your hat while taking a shower bath.

Keep your feet in a hot mustard bath but don't get your toes wet.

Open all the doors and windoys and keep out of draughts.

Sit in front of an electric fan but keep your raccoon coat well buttoned up front and back. Drink plenty of iced soup and New England boiled dinners.

Avoid fats, starchy food and do not step on any proteins. Take long detours around calories.

Partake of any substantial food that can be sucked up through a soda water straw.

Sleep with all the windows open. Which is fine advice during the mosquito olympics.

By following these unconstitutional by-laws you can keep your summer cold until October. By that time it is hay fever.

Anybody knows how to cure hay fever. Don't eat hay.

COUNCIL IDLE TODAY; STREET WORK UP NEXT

There will be no meeting of City Council today as the city fathers will follow the program of last week, when they took a day's rest from the usual week's business. Beginning tomorrow Council will devote much time to the street improvements scheduled for this season. Director Edward G. Lang, of the Public Works Department, expects to award many contracts this month and he also hopes to have more than 50 of the improvements started during the month.

SHIP CRASH TOLL MOUNTS TO 291 DEAD

SKYWARD

By Commander Richard E. Byrd

Wanted to Deliver Largest Plane Through the Air Over the Ocean

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

Commander Byrd was first trained for a seafaring profession before taking to aviation. He has explained how a gymnasium accident ruined his plans and later how he begged before he was given a chance as a flyer. He described the dangers of experimental or pioneering flying and the crash of the America, in which he was injured. He explains the sensations of his first flights and some of the reasons so many tragedies occurred in the early days of aviation.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Commanding Officer at Halifax, N. S.

CHAPTER VIII.

SPRING 1918: And here I was still basking in the Florida sunshine. True, I was no longer a listed cripple. I had my "Wings" to show that I was an accredited Navy pilot, and I could not kick about the lack of excitement at Pensacola, with the unending crashes and deaths that had so marred our training.

But it wasn't war. You have to be young and have your country fighting to know the hideous feeling of incompetence that comes when you can't get into the thick of things.

A kind of intrigue had got me off inactive duty and into flying. For years I had been very keen to fly. I had succeeded. I now began to plan a new conspiracy to get into the war zone. Of course, I use the term "conspiracy" in a relative sense.

I was still sane enough to know it would only be hurting the common cause for me to get to Europe without being of any real use there.

Since graduation I had been convinced that the next big feat in flying would be the air crossing of the Atlantic Ocean. Early in 1917 I had written confidentially to my friend Walter Camp, of Yale, asking his advice and help. This plan was reborn in me with new vigor in the spring of 1918.

In January that year the Navy had begun the construction of the largest flying boat ever built. She was named the NC-1. I conceived the idea of delivering the plane to the commander-in-chief in Europe by flying her across the ocean, via the Azores.

For months there had been loose talk about America's huge "air effort." Perhaps something concrete, such as direct delivery of one big plane, might have a distinct effect on the morale of the enemy.

The great trouble was that such a flight would require equipment and material beyond the immediate capacity of the Navy Department to furnish.

Seeks Camp's Aid

On the night of May 13, 1918, I sat up until 3 a. m., evolving another letter to Walter Camp. I figured that his large acquaintance among rich and influential men would make him a keystone in importance if only I could win him over. I wrote in part:

My Dear Mr. Camp:

I am very anxious to attempt the hydro-aeroplane flight of the Atlantic, and thinking of all of my acquaintances who might be able to help me in putting this through, I have decided that you are about the only one who could fill the bill.

Of course, the next thing is to get you to say you will stand with me and behind me in this undertaking. My plan would be to use one of the big new flying boats built for the Navy. These seaplanes will have three Liberty motors and will, I think, have sufficient fuel capacity for a trip to the Azores. From the Azores, it is only 800 miles to England.

This is quite an undertaking, and will need considerable preparation. I will take a crew of about five men, and we will all train according to plans laid down by you.

Prepares for Flight

A very encouraging telegram reached me from Mr. Camp three days later. And in the following week I learned confidentially that Walter Camp and Admiral Peary, discoverer of the North Pole, had gone to the Navy Department and urged that the flight be undertaken.

This touched me in a tender spot also, because I had long thought a flight across the North Pole was possible.

I was so encouraged that I took a friend of mine, Lieut. Walter Hinton, into my confidence. With his help and the permission of the commandant of the station we installed compasses in some of our planes. After brief instruction we managed to start a series of out-of-sight-of-land flights.

We obtained special data on fuel consumption of the Liberty engines and on the cruising radius and seaworthiness of the Navy flying boats. We found also that we had to design a special instrument for making extra rapid calculations, which were necessary owing to the high speed of a plane as compared with a ship. This, I think, was the first practical move to conquer the Atlantic by air.

Hinton was a great help in all this. "If I get my orders," I told him, "you get yours too."

We could almost see ourselves flying the Atlantic that same summer.

Commandant Approves

Despite red tape and war the situation was soon such that I was in a position to put in my official request for a flight. The big NC-1 was due to be finished in a few weeks and the night flying squadron had been organized for service abroad. On July 9, 1918, I wrote to Washington as follows:

1. It is requested that I be detailed to make a trans-Atlantic flight in an NC-1 type of flying boat, when this boat is completed.

2. It has long been my ambition to make such a flight and I feel that I am well qualified to be given this detail, in that I have made an extensive study of the subject, have specialized in air navigation and am thoroughly familiar with the large type of flying boat.

3. Should this request be approved, it is further requested that any detail of duty contemplated for me by the department, be not interfered with by such a trip.

As the commandant of the station had by this time become a convert to my scheme, he put the following endorsement on my request:

1. Forwarded.

2. Approval recommended. Lieutenant Byrd has the spirit and will carry this project forward successfully, and as the trans-Atlantic flight will be accomplished by some one in the not distant future it would be appropriate and creditable if the United States Navy should furnish the personnel for the first crossing.

Two weeks later I received telegraphic orders to Washington. The gang piled in to congratulate me, as I was looked on as the luckiest man at the station.

Little did I know that this was only Fate's ironic way of singling me out for the greatest disappointment of my life.

I packed in such a hurry that I left my razor and two of my best uniform shirts behind. Little difference it made, though. "I ought to be on my way across in the NC-1 by October 1 at the very latest," was my thought as the Pullman whirled me northward.

The Navy Department was working under such a terrific pressure that it was difficult to find out on arrival just what were the plans for me and the big seaplane.

I could find no one who would actually say she wasn't going to fly to Europe right away with me aboard her. At the same time I could dig up no conclusive proof that she was. As a result I oscillated between bursting optimism and abysmal dospondency.

On August 12 I was surprised to receive orders to Halifax, Nova Scotia, for duty as commanding officer of our U. S. Naval Air Station to be put there.

A supplementary document set forth that I was "in direct command of the U. S. Air Forces in Canada" and that I was "responsible to the senior British naval officer (Admiral W. O. Storye, R. N.) at H. M. S. Dockyard, Halifax, N. S., for prompt response to all demands made upon your forces for co-operation in carrying out the general mission of the Allied Naval Force in Canada."

Responsibilities in Assignment

Further I was told "your situation as a United States naval officer commanding air forces in another country, though the relations with this country be intimate and though the United States and this country be striving toward the defeat of a common enemy, requires the exercise of the utmost tact in every situation which arises."

All very imposing. But what had it to do with my dream of flying the Atlantic Ocean and getting into the War?

I went to an old friend in the Department and desparingly asked him if it were all up with me.

His view was that I was being given an excellent assignment and one full of possibilities. "Don't you know that the German subs have been raising hell in the northwestern Atlantic?" he added.

I admitted that I had been paying more attention to what went on in France and the North Sea.

"Your new job is a big step forward," he went on cheerfully. "You will start two stations in Nova Scotia. You will be boss; big responsibility. It will be up to you to keep the enemy subs clear of the coast. Also you will have to convoy seaward the heavy defenceless traffic bound out of North Sydney and Halifax for Europe."

"And then what?"

He lowered his voice, as had become the habit in those queer days: "You turn the station over to the Canadians and take your men to France to join the Northern Bombing Group."

Great. But suppose the War ended? Then where would I be?

Later a ray of sunshine came in the shape of still another set of orders supplementing my first ones. (I knew one man who received his fourth set of orders before his second set were delivered! Things moved fast that last year of the war.)

As these latest orders constituted the first official move to bridge the Atlantic Ocean by airplane, and are therefore of historical importance, I am going to give them in full:

Washington, D. C.

To: Commanding Officer, Naval Air Station, Halifax.
Via: Naval Attache, Halifax, Nova Scotia.

291 DEAD, SEA CRASH TOLL

International News Service.

SANTIAGO, Chile, July 9.—The battered hulk of the Chilean transport Angamos lay on the rocks at Punta Chimpel, off the coast of South Chile, today, grim vestige of a terrible sea catastrophe exacting a toll of 291 lives.

Only four survived to depict those last horror-inspiring hours before the ship broke up on the reefs. All of the 80 passengers aboard were lost. Many were women and children, the families of laborers on their way to the nitrate fields of nothern Chile.

A terrific storm came up late Friday night while the ship was in the Bay of Arauco, after having coaled at Punta Arenas. The captain headed the vessel out to sea to ride out the storm.

SHIP LOSES RUDDER

The storm increased to tremendous proportions. In the midst of it, according to the survivors, the ship lost her rudder. Tossed about at the mercy of the raging seas, the vessel drifted toward the reefs.

Attempts were made to lower life boats when it was seen that the vessel was certain to founder upon the rocks. One by one the lifeboats overturned with their human cargoes in the heavy seas.

Finally the ship was driven upon the rocks. It filled rapidly, then broke in two. The captain, who had remained upon the bridge until the last, shot himself in the temple when he realized that he could do nothing to avoid a terrible tragedy, according to the survivors.

Rescue ships which answered the Angamos' S. O. S. calls at first were unable to locate the wreck. Later they found it and picked up 80 bodies near Punta Chimpel.

The four survivors, dazed and almost naked, were cast upon the beach near Lebu, about nine miles south of Punta Chimpel.

COAST DREAR

The coast where the Angamos struck the rocks is desolate and dangerous for any kind of vessel during a storm. Punta Chimpel is about 50 miles southwest of the point where a British squadron, under Admiral Craddock, was sunk by the Germans in the early days of the World War.

The Angamos was an old vesel, having been built in Scotland nearly 40 years ago. She was of 6,000 tons displacement and was one of three transports in the Chilean naval service.

Punta Chimpel is about 230 miles south of Valparaiso.

Fall on Icy Walk Causes Death Of Woman

A fall on an icy sidewalk caused the death yesterday of Elizabeth Chess, 65, of 1719 McCullough street. According to the report to the coroner, the woman slipped on the sidewalk April 30, and fractured her hip. She was removed to St. John's Hospital where bronchial pneumonia developed. Death occurred at the hospital.

Spends Fortune in Death Party, Lives in Poverty

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., July 9.

YEARS after spending a fortune in fear that he had not long to live, C. Emory Titman, who weighed 545 pounds, is dead. At 49 he died of heart disease, a poor man who had eked out an existence at odd jobs.

Fifteen years ago Titman inherited $250,000 from his father, a Philadelphia manufacturer. When physicians diagnosed his excessive weight as a symptom of elephantiasis and warned him he had only a few months to live, he called his friends together and announced that he would spend the sum on one big party.

For months he was a familiar figure on Broadway, New York, spending lavishly. His weight grew until at one time he tipped the beam at 700. In a year the $250,000 was gone, but Titman's health remained as good as ever.

Coming to Atlantic City he worked as a masseur in a Turkish bath, as a taxi starter and other occupations.

DO YOU KNOW YOUR 'TRAFFIC COP?'

SECOND NEWS SECTION THE SUN TELEGRAPH SPORTS FEATURES

MONDAY JULY 9, 1928

HE SHOULD BE A FRIEND OF YOURS

Wouldn't you like to drive to the office in the morning and speak thusly to your favorite "traffic cop" when he beams upon you—as though nothing ever happened to make him angry!—passing: "Good morning, Officer Rafferty"—or else yell, "Hi Teddy!" Well, The Sun-Telegraph's series "Traffic Cops" will tell you how. This fellow today may be found on the South Side, but don't spend the day hunting for him when The Sun-Telegraph will tell you his name tomorrow.

SATURDAY'S "TRAFFIC COP" WAS JOHN HIGGINS, UNMARRIED, 234 44TH STREET, JUST A YOUNG FELLOW IN THE POLICING BUSINESS. HE WORKS AT CARSON AND SMITHFIELD STREETS AND AT THE ENTRANCE TO THE LIBERTY TUBES.

PHANTOM RADIO JUST A HOAX

CROOKSVILLE, O., July 9.—(AP.)—Crooksville is wondering who is being kidded. All last week reports emanated from here that a phantom radio station which signed itself "PDQ" was broadcasting local gossip to the embarrassment of many respected citizens.

Futile efforts were made to locate the station, the stories said, but the announcer continued his occasional sallies and ruined reputations nightly with remarks on secret poker parties, quiet little sessions over steins of home brew and nocturnal excursions with unrelated members of the opposite sex.

OFFICIAL DENIALS

But over the week county and village officials branded it all as "pure fiction." Mayor P. M. Ogg and Sheriff Harley McNab both said they have never heard of the station and denied that they were investigating it. It began to look as though the test car threatened upon the community by J. C. McNary, federal radio supervisor at Detroit, in order to locate the mysterious station, would not be needed.

Today there was another angle to the tangled tale: That the station never existed and gossip was never broadcast, but that a group of merry villagers had perpetrated a hoax upon their fellows by tapping radio sets with a wire having phone connections and then talked into the headphone from a point outside the house. The headphone was connected to the two primary terminals of the first audio transformer.

NEIGHBORS HELP ALONG

Radio experts described such a method as entirely feasible and assigned the rest of the scheme as depending on the human nature of their neighbors—the tale losing nothing in the telling—and the tendency of the neighbors to eagerly admit "they heard it, too," rather than appear to have missed something.

Will Rogers Says

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., July 9.

I see where Mr. Work, Mr. Hoover's head man, says that prohibition will not be brought out during the campaign, that "the campaign we propose to follow will be informative and constructive."

Now, Mr. Work, I don't want to tell you your business, for you just left a good job to take up this one, but when you start in "informing" or educating the country on anything, you got you some job.

There is millions more people in this country interested in a drink than are interested in political knowledge.

You start out with a drink, and a lecture on statistics, and see which one you can dispose of first.

TWO STOLEN IDOLS

MYSTERY! THRILLS! ADVENTURE!! LOVE!!!

by FRANK L. PACKARD

After 35 Years of Waiting, Scarface Sees Justice In Sight

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE

The body of Tom Kingsley is picked up by Capt. "Scarface" Sweeney and his mate, Marlow, off Singapore. Tom's brother, Robert, also an old "sea dog," is notified of the death and receives articles found on the corpse. Among these are two small but handsomely carved Ivory Idols. Robert Kingsley has good reason to believe that Hsi Yan, an ancient enemy, has returned after 30 years to seek vengeance. The Idols are stolen and Young Bob starts out to recover them. Bob finds Java Dick in Singapore, who promises his help in solving the mystery. The Idol contains the key to a great fortune. Bob hears the story of Hsi Yan's fight with his and receives the other Idol which contains the key to the cypher. Bob translates the cypher and then destroys it. Capt. Scarface makes his appearance on the scene.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY.

CAPT. SCARFACE'S teeth were clamped like a vise on the mouthpiece of his pipe. The pipe had gone out. And now, the recital ended, the blood was hot in his cheeks, enhancing by contrast the whiteness of the scar that semi-circulared his cheek from mouth to eye; and his hands, which he raised suddenly from his knees, were clenched until they looked like gnarled lumps of mahogany.

"Thirty-five years—my God!" he cried hoarsely. "Me, and Tom, and your old dad! I can see that night on Hsi Yan's junk like it was yesterday. That's where I got this"—he touched the scar with his knuckles—"but you said your dad told you?"

"Yes; he told me." Bob Kingsley's voice rasped unpleasantly.

"Thirty-five years!" repeated Capt. Scarface in the same hoarse tones. "But he got Tom in the end. Flesh and blood of the devil, that's what Hsi Yan was! Lad, I'll tell you something. Once I had a chance of settling accounts with him, when he didn't know I was within a thousand miles. I wish I had! It makes me feel like I was guilty now. D'ye see? Tom'd be alive if I had. But I thought Hsi Yan had forgotten. We all did. I never said anything to the other two about it."

Bob Kingsley nodded—but made no other answer.

Capt. Scarface got up from the skylight, walked to the rail, and with his back turned, stood there for a long time in silence; then, abruptly, he came back and halted before Bob Kingsley. But now, though the gray eyes were still hard and flinty, his voice was quiet and contained.

"Well, lad," he said, "Hsi Yan's gone, and so's Tom—nothing can alter that. What's to be done now?"

"There's the breed Hsi Yan left behind—Chen-shu and the rest of them who were the actual murderers," Bob Kingsley answered grimly. "That—and this treasure that Hsi Yan found. It's really yours and dad's, you know—it was Hsi Yan's unholy legacy to the three of you, as it were, though he never figured any of you would get it. You and dad"—he laughed shortly—"are the remaining legatees."

"We'll find it first before we talk about the ownership," said Capt. Scarface gruffly. "How d'ye know it ain't all a fake, ciphers and all, just to egg on those throat-slitting hellions of his to do his dirty work?"

"I don't know, of course," Bob Kingsley replied soberly; "but I'm dead sure in my own mind, after putting in the day thinking about it, that the treasure's there. Part of Mindar Singh's story was a lie, there's no question about that; but part of it, on the other hand, was unquestionably true. He certainly was in the house at Kalawa that night, he certainly knew about the secret passage, and he certainly heard Hsi Yan explain the key to the cipher. But what I believe most of all in his story—for, knowing nothing of what happened 35 years ago, he could not have made it up—was what took place at the end when Hsi Yan was mocking and jeering at Uncle Tom, and gloating over his revenge. I gave you, as nearly as I could, Hsi Yan's exact words, just as Mindar Singh repeated them—and I say again Mindar Sing could not have made them up. Do you remember what Mindar Singh reported Hsi Yan to have said about the treasure sweetening his revenge? 'The treasure is true and greater even than I have told you, Capt. Tom; but it is one you will never have! And because it has brought about this hour, it is of greater worth to me, who will not have it either, than if I had carried it away from its hiding place!' He could have no possible object in saying that unless it were true, for he never expected that Uncle Tom would leave the house alive. The treasure's there all right—I'd bank anything on it."

For an instant Capt. Scarface was silent, then he drove a fist into the palm of his other hand with a resounding smash.

"That's good enough, lad!" he exclaimed. "That's good enough for me!" We'll up anchor right now, you with the Alita and me with the Iola, and go after it!"

Bob Kingsley shook his head.

"No," he said quietly; "you will."

"Eh?" inquired Capt. Scarface. "What d'ye mean—I will?"

"Just this," said Bob Kingsley. "I've been trying to make up my mind all day what to do—and you're like a God-given answer to the problem. I didn't want to leave here until Chen-shu and I had fought out the last round. He's not far from being as crafty and cunning as Hsi Yan himself, and I'm not under-estimating him. He knows, and I know, that it's a finish fight now, and if the count went against me it would help a lot to know that dad had that treasure tucked away because things aren't any too rosy with him financially, and I'm afraid it's a question of that wheelchair with him, too, for the rest of his life. That's why I was tempted to go after the treasure first, and then come back and reckon with Chen-shu and his crowd afterwards. But I don't know where things stand here now. I don't know whether Mindar Singh is in with the gang or working on his own. If Chen-shu believes I've still got one of the idols, I couldn't lose track of him even if I wanted to; but if, on the other hand, he knows that Mindar Singh has both the idols, and doesn't know that I have translated the cipher, the logical thing for him to do would be to vanish so far as I am concerned—if he could. And if I went to Luala, he'd have all the more chance of doing so, and by the time I got back I might never be able to pick up his trail again. Do you understand?"

"Yes, I understand that!" There was a sudden and savage growl in Capt. Scarface's voice. "Blast him, and blast all of 'em to the pit! But I don't understand why I ain't the one as much as you, my lad, to bring 'em to a reckoning, and make 'em pay for old Tom's life! Wasn't it me, and Tom, and your dad that was on Hsi Yan's stinking junk that night?"

Again Bob Kingsley shook his head.

"If numbers counted for anything, I'd say yes," he answered. "But they don't! You and I can't carry on a small war of our own in the streets and houses in Singapore. There were, I'd say, 15 or 20 men on that junk at Kalawa. I'd like to get my hands on Chen-shu and settle accounts with him personally, and I'm going to if I can; but the one thing I'm after is to find out where their common lair is before I bring in the police. I don't want to run the risk of them scattering and going to cover all over the Archipelago as they would do if it leaked out through some stool-pigeon that the police were in this at all—that is, I don't want them to get an inkling that anything of that sort is even in the wind until it is too late to do them any good. Once I've found out what I want to know, I'll bring the authorities down on them without warning before they've time to make a move. Also, there's another reason why I want to go that far, if possible, and as quickly as I can, before handing over to the police. I rather expect that Verna—I mean Miss Lyle—will write the authorities accusing me of her brother's murder. I had to reckon on that, of course, when I left her with the Crowleys, but I always figured that I'd have a good few days of leeway—enough time anyway—because at best the opportunities of sending mail from Kalawa are few and far between."

A queer smile twitched at Capt. Scarface's lips.

"W[illegible] lad, if you want it that w[illegible] go," he said; "though I'd rather stay here with you. That's settled! I'll sail before sundown, and what I find I'll bring back and shove into a bank here in Singapore where it'll be safe until this whole business is cleaned up. But that last thing you said kind of brings us around to my story. You needn't worry none about Miss Lyle, writing any letters from Kalawa. She's here now in Singapore."

CHAPTER XLVII.

BOB KINGSLEY came slowly to his feet. He stared at Captain Scarface incredulously.

"Here! In Singapore!" he cried out hoarsely. "She couldn't be! Why, I left her in Kalawa two days ago—no, three now—and there wasn't any steamer in there, or any boat expected. I made sure of that. You're mad!"

"Not particularly, I ain't," said Captain Scarface complacently. "And seeing as how I brought her over in the Iola I ought to know."

"You brought her!" Bob Kingsley shouted. "Good God, man, what for?"

Captain Scarface's shoulders lifted in a comically helpless shrug.

"I don't know," he said. "I fancy it was because I couldn't help it. She came off in a boat just as I was getting under way, and insisted on me taking her along—I kind of figure she gave the Crowleys the slip at the last minute."

"But didn't you see the Crowleys? Didn't you talk to them?" demanded Bob Kingsley wildly. "Didn't they tell you that one of the reasons I left Miss Lyle in Kalaway was because I was afraid she would be in danger here in Singapore? Thank God, as it has turned out, I don't think, after last night, that she is in any danger now on account of that idol; but didn't the Crowleys tell you anything about this?"

SKYWARD

By Commander Richard E. Byrd

is not available, a floating hangar, complete with quarters and small workshop, can probably be supplied by next spring.

2. The general requirements for this station are:

(a) Sufficient area of sheltered water for maneuvering of large flying boat type seaplane with full load.

(b) Sufficient depth of water for a destroyer or seagoing tug.

(c) Telegraph or long distance radio communication is highly desirable, but not absolutely necessary.

3. You are directed to take up this matter with the Newfoundland Government, and obtain permission to make an inspection of their coast, for the purpose of locating a suitable place. The Department is of the opinion that a suitable place may be found in the immediate vicinity of Cape Broyle, about 60 miles south of St. Johns, and it is particularly desired that this place be thoroughly examined. Upon completion of this inspection, submit a detailed report to the Navy Department. Inasmuch as large seaplanes will probably not be supplied to air stations in Canada before the early part of next spring, the proposed station will not be established until that time, but the inspection should be made as soon as practicable without undue interference with your present duties.

(Signed) W. S. BENSON.

It was evident now that the Navy Department was at last under way with final preparations for the great flight. They would have to hurry, though. The season was getting late. The weather, never very good, was growing markedly more and more unsettled. But I know that if we could only get the NC-1 started up the coast the rest was easy.

I think by this time I was almost in a state of mind that if the enemy learned how easily we could fly our Navy plane across he would give up then and there.

During all these uneasy weeks of the late summer and early fall, 1918, I was nerved by a constant and stimulating busyness.

To establish a military station for the basing of aircraft was a walloping job, and the ordinary requirements of men and equipment were complicated a thousand times by the presence of big and delicate flying machines.

Before leaving Washington I was able to put through orders for Walter Hinton to join me. Also I was able to pick up several other good men to help me get started. But most of my crowd I had to take "sight unseen."

Love's Embers

Absorbing Sequel to "Revelations of a Wife"

By ADELE GARRISON

Madge Prepares for Her Battle With Dicky

DICKY'S room is next to my father's and is in a wing of the farmhouse which, when we first bought the big, rambling old place, appeared particularly suited for the purpose of housing the men of the family and our occasional masculine guests. The rooms were accordingly fitted up as bachelor quarters. But with my father absent and no guests in the house, Dicky had the wing to himself, and I knew that he had asked me to come to it for the talk he wished, because there would be less danger of our conversation being overheard there than in any other part of the house.

I never have believed in postponing unpleasant moments. "Get them over with as quickly as possible," always has been my motto, and therefore at Dicky's curt direction I responded promptly:

"I am going now," and turning, walked out of the room and went directly to my husband's quarters.

I had dusted and arranged his room but a short time before—a task I always perform myself, for Dicky complains that Katie invariably misplaces his things—but upon entering it again I caught my breath with the sense of incongruity, of absurdity, which since our estrangement always has come to me upon my entrance to my husband's quarters.

For upon the mantel, staring directly at me was my own pictured fa[illegible] a large framed photograph of me wearing an evening gown which had won Dicky's especial approval over a year before. It had been at his request that I had sat for the photograph, and he had selected the frame himself.

Another framed photograph of Junior and myself stood upon his desk, and to me they seemed the greatest mockery possible, in the light of my present relations to my husband. We were hopelessly estranged. I use the adjective with deliberation, for the sight of Edith Fairfax's picture where it had dropped from Dicky's pocket had smothered the little flames which I had discovered were leaping from the embers of my love for him. The undeniable attraction which Eleanor Lincoln had for him I could understand and explain. I had seen the exhibition of a similar feeling a dozen times before when he caught sight of some face or figure which he wished for his illustrations. It would be a flirtation which would not touch his heart, purely artistic but tinged with the air of romanticism which Dicky cannot help throwing around every such association. Lillian once said that "the Dicky-bird couldn't fold a woman's evening wrap around her without making her feel that he was desolated with the longing to kiss her hair," and I often have recalled the caustic comment, sometimes with unshed tears, again with cynical smiles.

But the image of Edith Fairfax I could not dismiss so easily. Secretly I knew she was the only woman in the world of whom there was any real reason for jealousy on my part. Even Grace Draper, of whom I had stood in terror for so long before her tragic suicide, and who had left me so awful a legacy, never had succeeded in swerving Dicky's loyalty to me. But Edith, at first but a negligible quantity in my husband's life, had grown closer to him with the years, until now, established firmly as his business partner and office associate, she was at the present time far more his confidante than I.

I had no time to consider carefully what the message written across Edith's picture might mean. Dicky was already at the door and I hastily pushed all thoughts of the pretty Virginia girl into an unused compartment of my mental filing cabinet, and braced myself for the coming contest of wills between us.

SMILES RIGHT BACK AT YOU

OUR DAILY SHORT STORY

A Framed Romance By RUBY RANDOLPH

MISS MILLY, blonde and motherly, her ample proportions moving rhythmically in the limited space between the mirror framed with ornate red pasteboard roses and the marble-topped counter, sighed as she poured chocolate syrup over vanilla ice cream for Dorothy Leigh.

She had known Dorothy, as well as the other inhabitants of the village and vicinity, most of her life. It was a shame for as pretty a girl as Dorothy to be buying her own chocolate sundaes. That good-for-nothing Jim! Miss Milly pursed her lips, then squared her shoulders in determination.

As she slid the short-stemmed tumbler across the white table, she observed:

"You're looking mighty pert today, Dorothy. I heard a nice young man say the other evening as how you were a mighty handsome girl."

A gleam of interest brightened Dorothy's listless eyes. She looked up inquiringly at Miss Milly.

"He's a well-to-do farmer too—some say rich. Has one of those big truck farms just outside the city—Ned Dalton; mebbe you've heard of him? No?—Well, he and his girl had a bust-up about a month ago. He had the plans all ready for the house, and the old lady—the girl's mother—was trying to change 'em all around to suit her notions. He asks the girl 'Well, speak up, what do you want?' and she says 'I guess we'll have to do as Mother says.' He jerks the plans up. 'Well, if your mother is going to run your home, she won't run mine,' he says, and jams his hat on and goes out the front door and never goes back."

"I don't blame him," Dorothy declared warmly.

"He liked you fine, too, Dorothy, said as how he'd like to meet you."

"Tell him to come around some time," Dorothy said, nonchalantly tipping the menu card.

It was scarcely a half hour later that Ned Dalton, a handsome gray-eyed, black-haired giant, having disposed of his heavy Saturday truckload, strode in, his trousers stuffed into the tops of his boots.

Miss Milly noted sympathetically his gloomy eyes, his set jaw. He slumped on one of the stools before the marble counter and growled:

"A coke, double-strong."

There was a gleam of cunning in Miss Milly's eye as she mixed the drink.

"A mighty pretty girl was here t'other day when you came in, and she said as how she thought you were some fine-looking man—so big and strong—an' masterful." Miss Milly was experimenting with adjectives.

"Masterful, eh?" Ned's teeth clicked against the glass.

"'Ye-eh;' she says 'A girl could just worship a man like that.' She can feel for you, too; she's been unfortunate in love. Was engaged to a no-account fellow, who chased around after others all the time and raised the dickens when she looked at another man!"

Ned sat up more erectly on the stool.

"Who is this young lady, Milly?"

Miss Milly pressed into his hand a card which she had written for that very purpose.

"She said as how she'd be tickled pink if you'd drop around," Miss Milly elaborated.

She chuckled to herself as she observed Ned's receding shoulders, square now rather than drooping as when he had entered.

The next day, Sunday, it rained continuously and Ned stalked from room to room of their big farmhouse in utter boredom. After supper he arose and mounted the stairs to his room with enthusiasm born of a purpose.

An hour later he pulled Dorothy's front door knocker with assurance. She might have a date, but it wasn't likely, as Miss Milly had said she had just broken her engagement and was lonesome.

"Miss Dorothy Leigh?" he queried. "I'm Ned Dalton."

Dorothy's eyes, for a moment puzzled, brightened with remembrance, but he noticed that she was seesawing nervously from one toe to the other. "Won't you come in?" she inquired doubtfully after a pause.

Since that was Ned's original intention, he accepted, depositing his hat on a chair in the hall.

As he entered the living room he faced a very dark young man sitting on the divan and scowling blackly.

Dorothy approached the young man with a little fluttery gesture of appeal.

"Jim, this is Mr. Dalton. Mr. Snead, Ned."

Jim slowly raised himself about six inches from his seat, ducked his head slightly and sat down with an even deeper scowl.

There followed an awkward silence.

"We've had plenty of rain today, and I got sorta lonesome, Dorothy," Ned remarked innocently, but it was that remark which precipitated the avalanche.

Jim turned upon Dorothy with a belligerent stare.

"Look here, Dorothy, I'm tired of this sort of thing, and I'm not a-going to stand for it. I came back here tonight to make up, and here you drag in this fellow. You can decide right now between this guy and me. Which shall it be?" He rose threateningly to his feet.

"Jim," Dorothy sprang in front of him, putting out her hands placatingly. "You are so unreasonable. Ned just—"

"Don't speak his name to me." Jim thrust her back with a force that sent her staggering. She would have fallen had not Ned stepped up quickly and caught her.

"Mr. Snead," Ned said levelly, "I know your sort. You browbeat and bluff women and children, don't you? Now you must apologize to this young lady before you leave the room."

Ned's cool gaze met the other's shifting, stormy eyes as they traveled in would-be scornful appraisal over his own capable bulk.

Jim took a step backward and scowled more darkly as he found himself compelled to retreat.

"I—I didn't mean to knock you over, Miss—Miss Leigh," he blurted in sarcastic tones.

He edged for the door and Ned heard the banging of the front door.

Dorothy was still standing close to him where she had been catapulted by Jim's shove. She was breathing hard and her lip was trembling.

She was pretty and appealing, and Miss Milly had said that Dorothy thought he was wonderful—and masterful.

His arm went protectingly around her and he drew her close beside him on the divan.

"Don't cry, honey. Everything will be all right." He patted her shoulder gently. "I—I love you."

The words really surprised him when they came. He had not intended to say that. He felt a sudden tightening in his throat and then a complete consciousness of having said exactly the right thing.

Dorothy nestled closer to him.

He was aware of something hard pressing between her head and his breast. He put his hand into his pocket and pulled out with an ejaculation of surprise the blue prints for the home he and Laura May had planned.

"See here," he exclaimed, delightedly. "I have something to show you."

Mrs. Leigh entered the room at that moment and Dorothy introduced them.

"What are those?" Mrs. Leigh questioned, gazing curiously at the blue prints.

"Some plans for our home," Ned said, and swallowed hard, as he looked at Dorothy to see if she would confirm his statement.

Dorothy smiled sweetly.

"See! This will be the living room and the stairway right here."

"The stairway ought to be on the other side," Mrs. Leigh declared.

Ned stiffened. This was the test. He waited with bated breath.

"But we prefer the stairway on this side," Dorothy stated with courteous, yet firm decision.

Mrs. Leigh marched out of the room, making no further comment.

"Ned," Dorothy said happily at the end of a blissful half hour. "We have a lot to thank Miss Milly for. She told me what you said about me."

"You—you mean," Ned said, bewildered.

"About my being pretty and your wanting to meet me."

"Oh!" Ned ejaculated, emitting a low whistle.

Of course, he wouldn't tell Dorothy that he hadn't said it. Probably Miss Milly had just told Dorothy that to make her feel good after she had said he was masterful and wonderful and all that.

SPORT COMMENT by JAMES J. LONG

Giant Discussion Recalls Days of Left-Hand Catchers—English Boxing Man Proposes Clearing House to Determine Some of World Titles That He Considers in Doubt. American Runners Show Their Speed.

DURING a fanning bee among the Giants at the Schenley Hotel, some one started a lively discussion by asking if there ever had been a left-hand catcher in the major leagues.

The question was brought up because the what-do-you think editor of the New York Evening Sun had published a statement from a New Yorker named C. A. Mills, as follows: "Having been a baseball fan for over 63 years, would say that I have never seen a left-handed catcher in the National League."

John Lobert.

One of those queried on the subject was Honus Lobert, former Beltzhoover citizen and now coach for the Giants, and it probably will surprise local fans to learn that Lobert is quoted by Will Wedge, Gotham critic, as saying that he had never seen a left-handed catcher.

JUDGING from this, Lobert, though 18 years old at the time and playing with strong semi-pro teams around here wasn't paying much attention to the big club of his home town in 1900, for on the Buccaneer team that year was a southpaw backstop named John (Jiggs) Donohue. The latter was purchased in the fall from the Dayton (O.) club and though he caught only two games before being released at the end of the season he attracted much attention as a member of the local team.

Later Donohue became one of the greatest first basemen of all time, starring at the initial sack for the Whitesox from 1904 to 1909, inclusive.

BUT Donohue is only a minor exhibit as to the possibility of a left-hand catcher being a success in the big leagues. The real proof is the long career of Jack Clements, the greatest left-hand backstop on record, who caught for the Phillies from 1885 to 1887, inclusive, a stretch of 13 years.

Gene Tunney.

Even then, Clements was not done in the majors, for he caught afterward for the St. Louis Nationals, to whom the Phils traded him with Jack Taylor, Tommy Dowd and Lave Cross, for Monte Cross, Frank Donohue and Bill Douglas.

CLEMENTS batted .300 five times, having such marks as .389 and .362 on two occasions. He was in every respect one of the best catchers in the league, even though some modern fans and players cannot conceive a left-hand pitcher being successful. Throwing to second base was not difficult for him. As Roger Bresnahan says he has been told, he simply shifted his feet and got the ball away under the nose of a right-hand batter, just as the right-hand catcher of today does when he has a left-hand swinger in front of him.

ANOTHER instance was the case of Fred Tenney, who started out as a catcher for Boston in 1894, 1895 and 1896, but who, like Donohue, later became a star first baseman. A number of others have been known in the minors and semi-pro ranks, but there is no call for them in the majors any more, as two-thirds of the hitters are right-handed.

While on the subject of left-hand baseball oddities, it might not be out of place to remark that in 1896 the Philadelphia Nationals had a southpaw shortstop named Billy Hulen, and until a few years ago the San Francisco club had a mighty good left-hand second baseman in Kid Moeller, a left-hand thrower.

THE latest proposal in the boxing game is a clearing house to determine what fighters really are world champions and what fighters are not.

An English boxing man named John Fearless asserts that some of the men now holding titles are really world champions, but that a greater number are merely champions of America. He declares that it has become a habit to minimize all British boxers merely because a few heavyweights have proved busts, and says that this is not a true test of comparative merits and that under the present system a fair gauge of the difference between America and British boxers cannot be made.

Joie Ray.

AMERICAN sport writers claim for their boxers the eight standard championships," Fearless is quoted. Some of them are beyond argument; others are very much open to argument. Gene Tunney, for example, is the undisputed heavyweight king. Nobody can dispute that Mickey Walker is other than the world's premier middleweight. Yet there are alleged world's champions who are logically just champions of America.

"The fault is that we have no international organization with representatives duly elected, to demand that certain titleholders of various countries should meet in the ring to prove who is the best boxer at a particular poundage. Newsboy Brown and Izzy Schwartz have each been proclaimed as a world's flyweight champion. Either may be admitted as the champion of his own country, but they must meet and defeat our champion, Johnny Hill, before a clear right to the world's crown is permissible.

"BUT this chaotic state of affairs will continue to exist until a proper clearing house is established. I am of the opinion that either the National Sporting Club or the British Board of Boxing Control should make an appeal to the various countries to elect a body of delegates whose decisions would be carried out for the betterment of international relations.

"I realize the enormous difficulties. The overcoming of them may seem improbable, but I do not believe it is impossible. It means a lot of hard work, but it is worth it if boxing is to be carried out on progressive lines."

IN THE final Olympic tryouts at Cambridge, Mass., Saturday, the astonishing display of speed given by American runners—particularly Joie Ray, Lloyd Hahn, Charley Borah, Eddie Hamm and Jackson Scholz—was not of a nature to cause any wild cheering in the Olympic camps of rival countries that are scheduled to compete with them in Amsterdam.

It will be a tough job to beat these Yankees in the various events.

IN THE eyes of many, Ray stands out as the most remarkable athlete of the lot. After doing very little in two previous Olympic carnivals, and being punched Coach Cozy Dolan during a clubhouse altercation.

Smith's rows with McGraw eventually took him to Boston, where he was idle most of the time. The Braves were on the point of selling him to the Pacific Coast League when the Pirate officials, guided by Skipper Bill McKechnie, claimed him over the waiver route. After a controversy, Smith landed in Pittsburgh.

Skipper Bill admired Smith as a catcher, and to the credit of the pugnacious one it should be recorded that he was one of the big figures in the winning of the 1925 pennant and the world championship of that season. McKechnie was able to hold Earl in check and he was a consistent workman in every way.

HIT BANCROFT HERE

Smith's tendency to swing to the jaw of diamond foemen reached a sorry climax in the Oakland Orchard last summer when, without any exterior warning to the host of assembled fans, he let fly with a punch that completely knocked out Dave Bancroft, then manager of the Boston Braves.

The stunned spectators did not know that the blow was engendered by a fierce fued that had been kept up over a long period. Nevertheless, the action of Smith was severely condemned, and Earl, himself, according to his teammates, expressed sorrow over his action as he headed for the clubhouse that afternoon. He told his mates he should have struck the victim of his anger with his open hand.

Be that as it may, Earl became extremely unpopular all over the circuit, and President Heydler, of the National League, fined him heavily and suspended him for 30 days, despite the fact that the Pirates, fighting for the flag, were in a bad way with injuries.

Dreyfuss and Bush stood behind the punished player when he was in his distress and Smith for a time showed his appreciation for the friendliness. This year, however, he has provoked Manager Bush, who has made no secret of his feelings toward Earl. Apparently the catcher has been warned, and now comes his release.

COLORFUL PLAYER

Pittsburgh fans will receive the news of Smith's release with conflicting emotions. While it will be difficult to find anybody who will uphold Smith for his bad act of striking Bancroft, he had his friends. Earl has a certain color that made him stand out on a club that is not heavy with outside appeal.

Earl's "goat-getting" tactics illumined the sportive screen as the Grimes is one of the few remaining spitball pitchers in the major leagues and also is one of the twirlers who bear down in their work at all times. He has a good fast ball that he uses in a pinch along with his spitter. Note his peculiar stance in delivering the ball to the plate. He digs in his right toe in much the same manner as a golfer drives off the tee.

BIG FIELD TO SEEK TITLE

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER.

WITH approximately 550 entries already in hand, the closing time is at hand for the receipt of nominations for The Sun-Telegraph's free West Penn amateur junior golf tournament for the William Randolph Hearst trophy which will be played, rain or shine, Thursday over the Schenley Park public links. No entries will be accepted after midnight tonight.

The task of sorting the entries and pairing the players and assigning starting times will be tackled tomorrow, and the list in its final form will be published Wednesday. All entrants must acquaint themselves with their starting times, for if they are not on the first tee when their names are called they will be defaulted. Promptness in this regard is absolutely imperative because of the record-breaking field, which makes this tournament the largest golf competition ever staged in this district.

The tournament will be at 18 holes medal play, with the field divided into two divisions, the sub-junior consisting of players who have not attained their fifteenth birthday, and the junior, embracing all players from 15 to 18. All play will be from scratch and the player who returns low score, whether a junior or sub-junior, will receive the handsome William Randolph Hearst trophy, properly inscribed. The runners-up in each class also will be suitably rewarded.

A full list of prizes will be announced with the pairings and starting times Wednesday.

Among the latest entries for the tournament are the following:

A.

Ames, Cyril (junior), Waynesburg.

ONLY CONSISTENT WINNER

Burleigh Grimes, obtained by the Pirates from the New York Giants last winter in exchange for Pitcher Vic Aldridge, has been the only consistent winner for the Corsairs this season. He is a hard worker, often performing out of turn and going to the relief of other starting pitchers, and has won the admiration of the fans, as was demonstrated when they applauded him to the echo when he was driven off the mound by the Reds late in the afternoon game of July 4.

WHAT is so scarce as a good big league manager? The question is brought home by the abdication last week of Ray Schalk as pilot of the Chicago White Sox.

The really great major league leaders of all time can be counted on the fingers of the two hands. The fair ones have held their jobs over long periods. The mediocre ones come and go. It is difficult to fill a place.

And yet the fans everywhere keep on yapping for winners, season after season.

NEW YORK is fortunately fixed in that it has John McGraw and Miller Huggins. The name of McGraw is synonymous with that

Paddock May Be Cleared

NEW YORK, July 9.—(AP.)—Charley Paddock may be cleared of charges of professionalism and his place on the Olympic team secured, without the necessity of a telegraph vote of the A. A. U. registration committee, if he can satisfy the chairman of that committee, Daniel J. Ferris, he has accepted no money for his motion picture tour or otherwise jeopardized his amateur standing.

This statement was made today by Ferris after arranging to confer with Paddock later in the day. Ferris, who is national secretary-treasurer of the A. A. U., indicated the action of the Southern Pacific Association, in previously absolving Paddock of the same charges, would have an important bearing in the decision.

"If there is not sufficient justification to put the issue to a vote we will clear Paddock forthwith," Ferris said. "No new evidence has come to hand since he was cleared some time ago. Our position is that Paddock is innocent until it is proven that he is guilty."

Local Stars Seek Crown

By VERNON A. SWARTSFAGER

A LARGE and classy field got away at 8 o'clock this morning in the qualifying round of the Pennsylvania State amateur golf championship tournament over the Oakmont Country Club links. The best players from all parts of the state were in the fold, with the celebrated Maxwell Marston and J. Woody Platt, of Philadelphia, prominent among the contenders.

Match play tomorrow and Wednesday will conclude the affair, and a meeting of the Pennsylvania Golf Association to elect officers for the ensuing year will be held tomorrow night.

The scores of the early finishers in the first 18 holes today follow:

G. A. Gill, 47-50—97; H. R. Domka, 44-55—99; John Walters, 46-43—89; Robert VanderVoort, 58-44—102; Baird Young, 48-47—95; Fred Mai, 60-55—115; George Demarest, 50-55—105; L. L. Voigt, 43-44—87; Bindley Reitz, 43-44—87; Howard Loeb, 38-43—81; Carl Schuster, 50-47—97; L. B. Smith, 45-50—95; George Orcutt, 42-44—86; Harry Goff, 45-49—94; David Mitchell, 48-46—94; A. C. Sherrick, 45-42—87; James Deal, 50-49—99; G. N. Beckwith, 47-48—95.

Pirates trimmed the Washington Senators in 1925. He provoked Manager Stanley Harris of the opposing forces to such an extent that the scrappy Harris' work seems to have been affected. Bucky found it hard to get to first base in any of the games, he preferring to counter the verbal attack of Smith who lashed him cleverly while Harris stood at the plate.

Goose Goslin was another star of the diamond who found the Smith shafts penetrating. Goslin batted hard and effectively in the series, but in the games where Smith heckled him he was just an ordinary performer. All the while the vast assemblage looked on in delight, this being particularly true of the throngs that filled Forbes Field.

M'GRAW AIDED SMITH

Despite John McGraw's aversion toward Smith, an antipathy that grew out of many warm sessions, the pilot of the Giants forgot his personal feelings out of respect to the National League while the Pirates and Senators fought it out in those memorable games.

McGraw "covered" that series for a press syndicate, but he took time out to give the Pirates some valued tips regarding the Washington players. John J. even went so far as to telephone Smith at a rather early hour, Earl being thunderstruck when he heard the voice of McGraw on the other end of the wire.

Before the series started, the Giant manager publicly advised Bill McKechnie that it would be better for the team to keep Smith on the bench, but Skipper Bill had a lot of confidence in "Oil of the Ozarks," and Earl had plenty of work to do in the series.

McGraw had some good counsel to offer the Pirates and he was big enough to get in touch with Smith when he learned that Earl was to catch the game of that afternoon.

A very striking incident of the sixth game of that series concerns McGraw and Smith. The Pirates were leading by one run with Goose Goslin at bat in the eighth.

Smith was under instructions from McKechnie to make Goslin hit slow pitches. The Senator slugger caused a lot of moaning in the stands by hitting several fouls into the seating section, the drives being too close to fair territory for comfort.

Eventually Smith held up the game and went to the mound. McGraw, in the press section, surmised what Smith was doing. John J. knew that on more than one occasion Smith had persuaded a Giant pitcher to disobey McGraw's instructions and throw something that Smith wanted.

In this particular case, Smith advised Ray Kremer, the pitcher of the day, to cut loose with his fast pitch.

"I know what your instructions are," said Earl, "but I'll take all the blame. You put everything you have on the next pitch and get it in there!"

Kremer was thus constrained to try the experiment, and Goose, who had been swinging at the slow offerings, apparently was a bit off his stride, for he popped out.

McGraw encountered Smith in the Schenley Hotel after the game.

"I knew what you did out there to Goslin," said Mac. "But if he had parked one in the stands I don't know what we would have done to you."

Smith is gone—but not forgotten.

of the Giants. Huggins has had to battle his way to recognition, but there is no doubt that he has arrived. For several seasons now he has been directing one of the best baseball machines in history.

In Philadelphia, Connie Mack, as manager and part-owner of the Athletics, has held on since the start of the American League and is recognized as one of the best in the business—but he hasn't won a pennant for 14 years, or since his old White Elephant stars were scattered to the winds. The Phillies, who have won only one pennant in their long career in the National League, average a new manager about every other year.

IN Boston, the Red Sox have called back Bill Carrigan to lead them after an absence of a decade from the game, and the Braves have been experimenting since the days of George Stallings, and now have their second manager of the current season, Rogers Hornsby, who supplanted Jack Slattery after the pennant race got under way.

Wilbert Robinson continues a fixture through the years in Brooklyn, and Bucky Harris, after winning pennants in his first two years at Washington, in 1924 and 1925, remains at the helm of the Senators.

OUR own Pirates have been trying this man and that since the end of the long reign of Fred Clarke. They have had Jimmy Callahan, Hugo Bezdek, Honus Wagner, Bill McKechnie and now Donie Bush. In Cincinnati, Jack Hendricks is going along fairly well as the successor to a string of leaders. Detroit, having tried Dan Howley, Ty Cobb and now George Moriarity, still is looking for another Hughey Jennings; the Cubs in Chicago are making progress under Joe McCarthy, but the memory of the old Peerless Leader, Frank Chance, still is revered; the White Sox have tried many since the days of Fielder Jones, with Jimmy Callahan, Pants Rowland, Eddie Collins, Ray Schalk and now Lena Blackburne included in the list; St. Louis has shaken dice with fate in the way of managerial shifts for both the Browns and Cards, and now has Howley and McKechnie in the saddles; Cleveland has known the vicissitudes of numerous turnovers, and so it goes.

Many are called but few are chosen. And yet the first blatant yell of the fan horde when things go wrong is a demand for the scalp of the manager, with the injunction that the club get a GOOD manager. The good ones are few and far between, as has been noted herein—but you can't tell the fans that and make them believe it.

THE new craze is on and soon it will be sweeping like wildfire through this part of the country. It is the roller skating marathon fad, and it promises to take up where marathon dancing left off. The guiding genius providing the impetus is Earl A. Seitz, long a promoter of roller skating as a sport and business. He has contracted for the use of rinks throughout the tri-state district and shortly will blossom out with a series of such competitions, which will be conducted along the lines of the six-day bicycle races and limited to two weeks' duration.

Teams will consist, as in the dancing, of men and women partners, who will skate alternately in half-hour periods. The grind will be continuous until all but one couple are eliminated or to a two weeks' finish with the winners of the prizes to be determined on a basis of mileage of the circular tracks covered, a guarantee against stalling. Because of the hot weather and the strenuousness of the test, all contestants will be garbed in regulation track uniforms and thus will not be hampered by heavyweight clothing. Owners of rinks who have been in the "racket" for years have embraced the idea put across by Seitz as a sure-fire winner for what are normally their slow months and see in it besides an incentive for more people to go back to roller-skating, a healthful exercise, and thus boom their business for next fall and winter.

Seitz pins his big race for one of the Pittsburgh rinks, and already has arranged to get one of his races under way at Youngstown either next Sunday night or a week later and will swing into action with another in the capacious Washington Gardens at Washington, Pa., before the end of the month. Judging from the momentum he has gathered in his new venture, he looms as the Milton Crandall of the first variation of that ingenious promoter's marathon idea. He has worked out an elaborate plan of conducting the events and doesn't see how he can miss cleaning up on them and at the same time giving the fans a good new sporting diversion to patronize.

SPORT COMMENT

by JAMES J. LONG

marked down as a dead one in this country, Ray has flashed the most sensational comeback of the year. First he won a place on the marathon team by giving up the mile and going in for the race of 26 miles 385 yards, and on Saturday he not only won the 10,000 meter event by running all opponents dizzy, but smashed an American record that had stood for 16 years, and made it seem strongly probable that after all this country is going to have a chance in the long distance races, even against the Finns, Swedes and others, who have been rated as having the edge on Uncle Sam in these contests.

WASHINGTON, July 9.—(AP.)—Horace Lisenbee, one of Washington's leading pitchers last season, his first in the major leagues, has been sent to the Minneapolis club of the American Association on option, Whether he will return to the Senators, President Griffith said, depends upon his showing in the minors.

GIANTS GET WIN

WHEELING, W. Va., July 9.—(AP.)—The New York Giants yesterday defeated the Wheeling Mid-Atlantic League team, 6 to 4, in an exhibition game. One big inning, the fourth, gave the Giants the victory. They bunched three singles, a triple and two doubles to score five runs.

Lingo Faces Rudy

BOXING shows are listed tonight at Washington, Pa., New Castle and Kittanning.

Terry Lingo of the North Side, the most promising young lightweight in this section, meets his stiffest test yet in Young Rudy, Charleroi's perpetual fighting machine, in the 10-round windup in the Washington Gardens; Rosy Stoy, of Lancaster, Pa., and Phil Verdi, of Rochester, N. Y., box the main event in the New Castle Jolly Bowl, and Freddie Boylstein, of Kittanning, and Young Zabish, of Clairton, furnish the 10-round fireworks in the Columbia Theater at Kittanning.

Young Billy Wallace, of Youngstown, and Frankie Rio, of Cleveland, mix in the eight-round semi-final at New Castle and Frankie Porto of Clairton meets Joe Boychan at Newark, O., in the six-round preliminary. In four-rounders, Terry McManus of Lawrenceville opposes Jimmy Kaplan of Youngstown and Romeo Pacelli and Pug Murphy of New Castle also clash.

Jack McFarland, Wilkinsburg featherweight, boxes Jimmy Gizzy of Washington in the semi-final at the Washington Gardens. Joe Louder of the South Hills and Tony France meet in the second bout, and there will be one other preliminary.

Walter Dickerson of California, Pa.; Terry McGovern of Chambersburg and George Von Grey of Templeton are among the boxers in the preliminaries at Kittanning.

Joe Dundee, welterweight champion, and Paulino Uzcudun, Basque heavyweight, won bouts by knockouts in Spain, Saturday night; Dundee technically stopped Hilario Martinez in the seventh round at Barcelona and Paulino won in 11 rounds over Ludwig Haymann, the German champion, in a bout at San Sebastian for the European championship.

Friday, the thirteenth, means nothing to the Twenty-seventh Ward A. C., which will stage its second amateur boxing show in its open-air arena in California avenue, North Side, next Friday night. Eight bouts are listed. The first show was marred by several postponements, due to rain.

Dave Shade boxes Bert Colimia at Chicago tonight. Other bouts listed tonight include Roberto Roberti vs. Jack Gross and Mike McTigue vs. Matt Adgie, 10 rounds each; Philadelphia; Rosy Rosales vs. Wilson Yarbo, 10 rounds, Cleveland, and Eddie (Kid) Wagner vs. King Tut, 10 rounds, New York.

Business Is Doing Better. Stock Outlook Uncertain.

—By B. C. FORBES—

JUST as a thunderstorm clears the atmosphere, the Wall Street atmosphere was considerably cleared by the recent stock market storm, and now sentiment in regard to both the general business outlook and the security market outlook is better.

THE majority of businessmen and bankers express confidence that the second half of the year will bring at least a moderate increase in industry and trade. They declare that already there are encouraging indications. They point to such developments as these:

Record-breaking building activity; gratifying crop prospects; larger demand for labor; satisfactory consumption of steel; unprecedented production and sales by leading automobile companies; increase in railway traffic and authoritative estimates that car requirements during July, August and September will exceed last year's by fully 6 per cent; unprecedented mail order sales; a decrease in commercial failures; notable improvement in the American shipping outlook; a stable general price level; at least some progress towards curing the lamentable oil situation; somewhat better reports from retail merchants; many increases in dividend payments.

THUS far political considerations are not dampening business confidence. It is unusual to meet anyone who fears that the presidential campaign will cause unsettlement or even hesitancy. The assumption in the financial East still is that the majority of voters will favor a continuance of Republican administration, especially should business and employment prove reasonably good between now and November.

ONE thunderstorm sometimes is not sufficient to clear the air entirely. Few look for another thunderstorm in Wall Street. But the atmosphere may again become charged with dangerous electricity. The marking-up process in speculative favorites has been resumed aggressively. The public did little in the market immediately after the violent break, but if the manipulated advance be maintained, outside buying on a large scale may conceivably be fostered.

It can be taken for granted that, should there develop any wild speculative orgy, the financial powers that be would not sit idly by, but would act effectively.

THE money market cannot be ignored. The latest weekly bank return doubtless was influenced by the extraordinary mid-year settlements. Should another increase in brokers' borrowings be returned this week, however, the Federal Reserve Board doubtless would take notice—and give notice to Wall Street to exercise some measure of conservatism. The 10 per cent call money rate, although not alarming in itself, was not entirely without significance. The Federal Reserve Banks' ratio of reserve has fallen very materially, not to say seriously. And gold exports apparently are not ended.

Briefly, the monetary outlook is this: If speculation be kept within bounds, firmer money is unlikely. If not, not.

Should the 4½ rediscount rate be raised, it would be a signal to cautious investors to pull in sail.

THE writer has been traveling outside of New York and talking with many people. He has found nearly everyone bullish on either the stock market as a whole or on pet issues. There is, however, a disposition in some quarters to wait before re-entering the market.

Under these circumstances an upward trend in stock would not be astonishing. But a sensational movement in either direction would be almost certain to bring acute unsettlement, perhaps demoralization.

THE exercise of moderation all round should bring fulfilment of the hopeful business expectations now prevalent.

SUGAR MARKET.

NEW YORK, July 9.—(AP.)—The raw sugar market was quiet early today and in absence of business prices were unchanged at 4.36c for spot duty paid. There appeared to be both Cuban and duty free buyers available at this level but buyers showed little interest except at 1-32c below or 4.33c.

Raw sugar futures were fairly steady during early trading with prices showing advances of 1 to 2 points. The cables were considered encouraging and this probably caused some covering and trade buying but houses with European connections again sold the distant position. After the early buying movement had been supplied prices reacted and at midday were set unchanged to 1 point lower.

The refined market was unchanged to 5 points lower with fine granulated now ranging from 5.45c to 5.90c. A good withdrawal demand was reported prompted by the warmer weather but new business continued light.

SPECULATORS FORCE SHARES UPWARD

NEW YORK, July 9.—(AP.)—Major speculative activity in today's stock market was again on the up-side, but the buying continued selective in character. Early gains of 1 to 8 points were interspersed with several soft spots. Trading was on a slightly larger scale than last Friday, total sales in the first three hours running close to 1,200,000 shares.

There was no change in credit conditions. Call money renewed at 5½ per cent but the amount available was reduced by the calling of about $15,000,000 in loans.

An increase in Pennsylvania Crude prices and a sharp break of $2.50 a bale in cotton prices following the publication of the Government report showing an increase of 11.14 per cent in acreage were the most interesting trade and business developments of the day.

Nearly a dozen issues mounted to new high ground for the year, the list including Montgomery-Ward, Indian Refining Preferred, Motor Products, Warner Bros. Pictures A, and General Gas and Electric B. General Railway Signal, Allied Chemical, Division Chemical, and American Express all sold 4 to 5 points higher.

COTTON MARKET

NEW YORK, July 9.—(AP.)—The cotton market opened steady today at an advance of 3 to 8 points on moderate demand which appeared to be based on reports of further showers in eastern and central belt sections over Sunday.

Active months sold about 3 to 10 points net higher, but on reaming around 22.54c for October, the market soon turned easier with that position selling down to 22.41c or 3 points under Saturday's closing quotation. Trading remained comparatively quiet, as if the market awaited the official acreage figures. Fluctuations were narrow with prices holding close to last week's final quotations at the end of the first hour. Private cables said early buying by Bombay in Liverpool had been supplied by local and Liverpool selling and reported a slow inquiry for cotton cloth, with buyers reserved.

The market was quiet later in the morning, with fluctuations comparatively narrow. Liquidation through wire and commission houses was in comparatively small volume and was absorbed by covering or trade buying on declines of 4 or 5 points from Saturday's closing quotations.

The government report, however, placing the increase in acreage at 11.4 per cent, making the area under cultivation 46,695,000 acres, was above expectations and was followed by more general selling, which soon sent the price of October off to 21.80c, or 64 points net lower.

MEDITATIONS of a MARRIED WOMAN

by HELEN ROWLAND

CAVIAR TO THE WOMEN

GOING through life without love is about as thrilling as going through dinner without an appetite or taking a long walk just for the exercise.

Now that Paris has tightened up the divorce laws and Mexican decrees are invalid, it looks as though soon the only thing to do will be to marry somebody you can stand for life.

* * *

The first time a man actually realizes that he is married is when he catches himself looking at other women with that strange, new, wistful sort of interest.

HELEN ROWLAND

A woman may go in for business, art, law or medicine, but they are all just side lines—little running accompaniments to the real motif of her life, which is LOVE.

* * *

The old-fashioned wife spent so much of her time keeping her halo on straight that the modern woman sweetly but firmly refuses to wear one, on the theory that it would cramp her brain and look ridiculous on her bob.

* * *

As long as women continue to look upon marriage as a get-rich-quick scheme and men continue to regard it as an emotional adventure or a "sex-periment" the divorce mills will go right on merrily grinding.

No doubt Solomon told each of his 700 wives that not one of the 699 others "understood him."

* * *

Nothing makes a woman more furious than to make up her mind never to speak to a man again and then have him fail to show up so that she can't tell him so.

* * *

The American Ideal—Going into debt in order to keep the kind of car that will impress people who are going into debt in order to keep the kind of car that will impress you.

* * *

A girl's idea of a loyal, devoted man appears to be one who will double-cross another woman for her sake.

HOW TO KEEP WELL

by Royal S. Copeland, M.D.
U.S. Senator From New York

Nothing Catching When Care Is Taken

THERE are many important things to keep in mind when taking care of any case of contagious disease. The chief one is to prevent the trouble being communicated to others.

To an uninstructed person this may seem a very difficult matter to control. But, as a matter of fact, it is not. It does, however, require the strictest attention to a few plain rules.

DR. COPELAND

The reason it is so hard for many good housekeepers to keep these rules is that so few of us realize how important it is to be strictly and scientifically exact. While the rules for disinfecting in the care of the sick are simple, the nurse who would enforce them effectively must be 100 per cent efficient. One single detour from the path of perfection in this matter may mean another case of illness in the family.

Suppose a child or some other member of the family has measles, scarlet fever, diphtheria, or other contagious disease. Of course the sick one will be kept absolutely away from the rest of the household, but this is not enough.

All tableware and other things, as well as the clothes and toilet articles used by the patient, should be kept separate and apart. The dishes should be rinsed off and boiled in a special vessel when they are taken from the sick person's tray. Then they should be placed upon a separate shelf ready for their use next time.

A basin or tub filled with a solution of lysol, in the proportion of one teaspoonful to a quart of water, should be kept in the room, and all underclothing and bed linen used by the patient should be dropped into this as they are removed. Boiling of these articles will complete their disinfection, and then they may be sent to the laundry or to the washtub.

In all diseases where there is peeling or scaling of the skin, such as occurs in scarlet fever and measles, this precaution is particularly necessary.

Discharges from the nose and throat should always be caught on a square of gauze. This should be placed at once in a paper bag and in due time the bag and contents should be burned. Before being disposed of, the urine and feces should be sprinkled with chloride of lime.

Infectious conditions may be communicated from one person to another by the hands of the nurse. On this account great attention should be given by the nurse or attendant to keeping her own hands scrupulously clean—that is, surgically clean.

For this purpose a teaspoonful of lysol to a quart of water is as good a disinfectant as any. This should always be at hand. Before and after handling the patient, the nurse should wash her own hands in soap and water, scrubbing them with a brush. She should then clean her finger-nails, wash her hands again and dip them in the disinfectant.

These are a few suggestions which will help a lot to control the spread of contagious diseases. It is your duty to neglect no detail even if it is a bother.

Answers to Health Queries

I. D. B. Q.—What do you advise for a poor sense of smell?

A.—May be due to nasal catarrh. Use a good nasal spray in the nose and throat night and morning.

R. E. M. Q.—What would cause the ankles to feel weak? I cannot seem to keep them straight. I feel better when I wear tight fitting shoes with high heels.

A.—May be due to an arch condition. See an orthopedist for his opinion.

NOW SHE SWIMS!

First She Waded, Then She Posed; Now She's an Adorable "Fish."

Drawn By Dorothy Flack

© 1928 by Int'l. Feature Service, Inc. Great Britain rights reserved.

TIME was when a trip to the beach necessitated the most terribly clumsy outfit, which everybody was pleased to call a bathing suit. Yards and yards of ugly flannel and huge hats and—whisper softly—even tight stays were part of the costume. Then, the belle of the beach simply waded in the water, wetting her tootsies and shrieking with fear every time a wave rolled shorewards. Then, times and fashions changed and she was all dressed up in lovely satin and silk and beruffled and fluffied attire the weight alone of which would have pulled her down under the rushing waters. So she simply posed and looked lovely and "bathed" in the admiring glances cast her way.

But now—now she swims! And dives! And vies with her brother in feats of water prowess and he has a hard time to keep up with her. No frilly costume for her; no big hats; no doodabs to hinder her rushing victory over the billowing waves. No siree! And she hasn't lost one whit of the charm that so enthralls all beholders. Now she's a pal, not a pose! Now she swims—straight into the hearts of all who behold her.

For the Lovelorn

By ELEANOR GALE

Rusty

DEAR MISS GALE:

I met a young man five months ago and since then I have gone steady with him. Before we went together he had another girl friend. Because of her religion his mother disapproved of his keeping company with her and the affair went "to the rocks." Recently he went to the hospital and this girl came to see him. While he was in the hospital his mother was in Florida. Since then his attentions toward me have greatly turned and he seems to have forgotten me. His mother calls me almost every day and wants me to come out for dinner some evening, but it seems to me that if I would go out to his home for dinner it would look as though I am running after him. Does it look that way to you? My father tells me that he will come back and for me to forget him. But, dear Gale, I do so like him. I agree with you on your drinking question, but as to smoking, I think it is all right in its place, but some of these young kids who try to smoke don't know how. As to petting, what harm is there in it? I can see none whatever. Will you please tell me what harm there is in it? Hoping to see my answer soon,

RUSTY.

He must like the other girl better, Rusty, so try to forget him. Petting is cheap and vulgar, and I am sure you don't want to be considered either.

Cleopatra and Camille

DEAR MISS GALE:

We are two sisters, aged 17 and 19, and have written to you before and see no reason why it has not been in print, as we have complied with all your rules. Yet we haven't lost hope and perhaps you may answer this. We would like you to answer the following questions.

Do you think that 1 o'clock is too late to come home from a party?

It is all right to kiss your boy friends good night?

How does it lower a girl's regutation if she smokes in her own home and no one sees her?

Thanking you we remain,

CLEOPATRIA AND CAMILLE.

I am sorry you missed seeing your other letter in print. Five o'clock is many hours too late to come home from a party, my dear. Don't kiss the boy. It is cheapening. Smoking in one's own home will probably not effect a girl's reputation, but smoking is not a healthful practice for you.

Two Broken Hearts

DEAR MISS GALE:

We are two girls in our teens and No. 1 likes two boys. One is not the same nationality as she is. Does that make any difference? He has written her many letters and told her how he loves her and then he turned her down for merely nothing. She still likes him anyway. The second boy she has liked for four years, but he seems bashful. He has told some people that he liked her, but he won't even speak to her—but usually stares when he sees her. Please advise. No. 2 likes a boy who works and is through school. He treats her very nicely when he is around her, but never asks to take her any place. He seems very jealous when he sees her talking to another fellow. Do you think he likes her? He has written her several letters. Should she correspond? Would it be all right for No. 1 to write to her second boy friend? Please advise.

TWO BROKEN HEARTS.

This first boy doesn't seem very trustworthy so why think about him any more. Invite the second boy to call. That is a girl's privilege, you know. If the second girl likes this boy, reply to his letters.

Anxious

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have read the Lovelorn for many months and never thought I would have to write you for advice myself.

I am 17 years of age and maybe you think I am too young to think of such things, but hope, Miss Gale, that you will be able to help me in this problem.

I met a boy last summer and went out with him almost every other night, and like him well. He went away in the winter and just came back recently. Since he came back he has said "hello" to me when I see him.

Last summer when I had a date with him one night I left him and my girl friend and I went with some other boys for a machine ride, so I think that maybe he is still angry about that night, as that was the last night that I saw him. Hoping that you will put my letter in the paper, as I am anxious to know how I can regain his friendship again, I am, yours for lots of success.

ANXIOUS.

Next time you see him invite him to call. That is your privilege, you know. That was a rather rude thing to do last summer, and he may still be hurt about it.

Watched

DEAR MISS GALE:

I have been reading your corner of the paper for some time and am extremely interested. I wish to ask you about a few things concerning my boy friends and mother. Mother and I are quite "pally" and go out together quite a lot. I love my mother with all my heart, but there is one thing which she does that I don't like. I have lost my best boy friend just on account of it. When I have a date and mother thinks the boy may be somewhat fast she stays in the room practically all the time. She goes out and then comes in very quietly. I do not drink, smoke or pet, and mother has no reason to think I would do anything I shouldn't do with my friends. I don't mind mother coming in and talking, but she acts as if she came in to watch us, then she keeps coming in and going out the whole evening. It is most embarrassing. What shall I do? I have talked to her about it and she seems peeved. It seems when mother isn't in my mother is. My brother is 25 and I am 22 years old. So you see I'm not a child and I would like a little bit of privacy with my friends. I am,

WATCHED.

I don't blame you in the least, my dear. Your mother's lack of confidence in you is not complimentary. Tell her quite frankly that you do not care to be under surveillance all the time, and ask her if she wants you to continue having your friends come to your own home. It is embarrassing, I grant you, to have someone slip into the room while you are talking.

Worried Nineteen

DEAR MISS GALE:

I am a senior in high school and am 19 years old, very popular and play on all teams in school. Neither smoke, drink or use vile language and never will. I am in a mix-up between two of the fairer sex of the school and I am coming to you for help, for I know you are noted for the wonderful answers given in this column. Recently I took a young lady, whom I shall call A, to a banquet, and here I met the girl of my dreams, who is very popular in the town and speaks to me very often. I shall call her B. I have another affair coming on soon and I do not know whom to choose to accompany me. So I am asking you. Please help me solve this problem. Much luck to all members and hoping you further success, I am,

WORRIED NINETEEN.

Ask the one you like, of course.

TOMORROW'S HOROSCOPE

Tuesday, July 10

CONFLICTING astral influences are noted in this day's astrological chart. Although there is an adverse figure putting the employment in jeopardy, and it is not a propitious time for launching new ventures, yet there are auguries of substantial returns for faithful and diligent service and application. It is possible that there may be favors or recognition from elderly persons or institutions. Domestic, affectional and social satisfaction is menaced.

Those whose birthday it is may have a year of conflicting conditions. Although employment and new undertakings are under adverse rule, yet there is promise of reward for industry and perseverance. Personal matters may not be all that is desirable.

A child born on this day may have many excellent qualities making for stable success in life, despite trials in employment and in new ventures. Its personal contacts in life may not be wholly satisfactory.

Courage consists not in blindly overlooking danger but in seeing it and conquering it.—RICHTER.

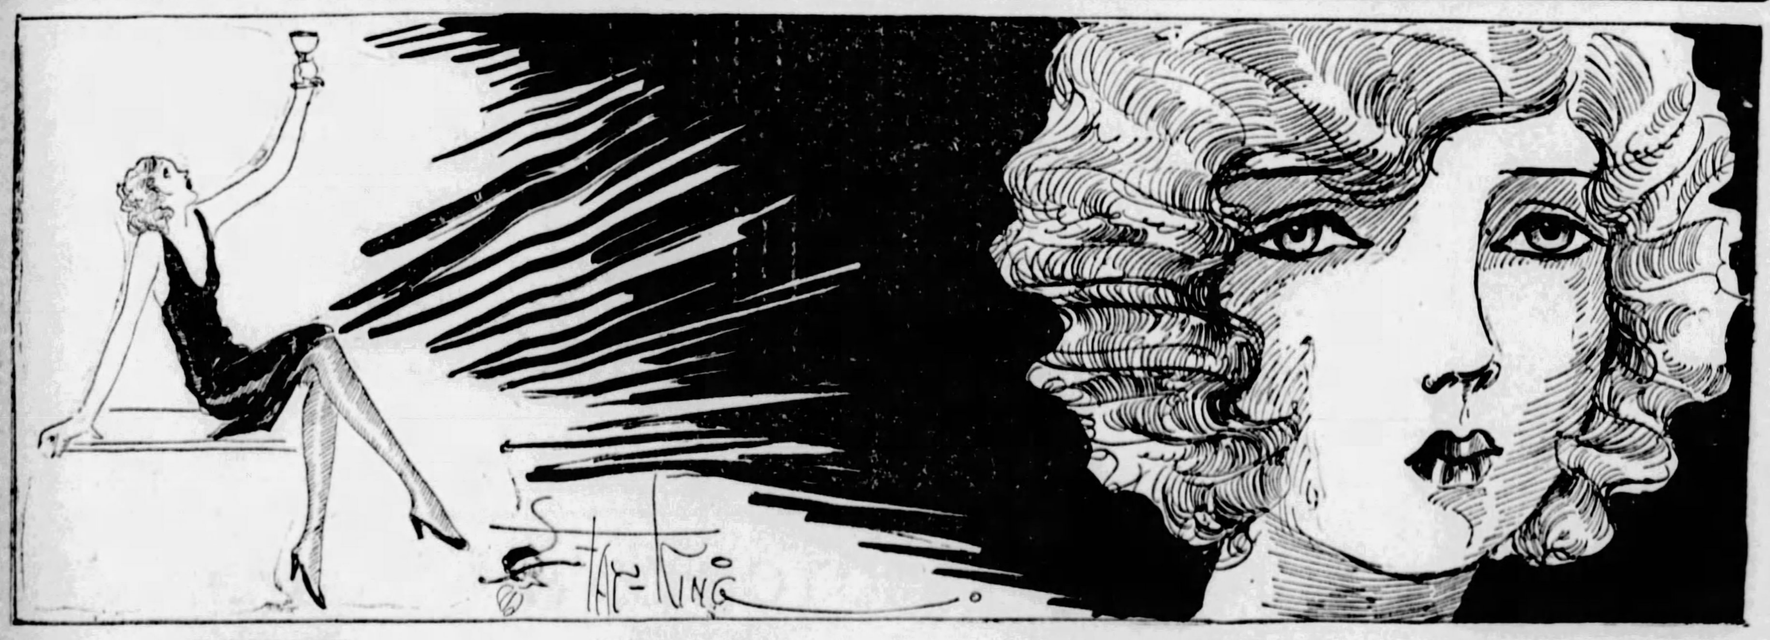
Parisian Novelty Stockings

Many a pair of silk hose, for formal afternoon or evening wear, have plain mesh at the back with front inserts of lace. In some the lace trimming is merely at the ankle, while in other styles it extends from the slipper vamp nearly to the knee. Beige hose with beige lace, brown with matching lace, all black and black with white are the types most usually shown, in Parisian novelty stockings, recently imported.

Rat-Tail Trimming

The Tale of Rat-Tail is told in the braiding of many of the most charming summer ensembles of chiffon or georgette. As the filmy coats of these cool costumes are unlined, the rat-tail braided trimming not only adds decorative value, but also the weight necessary to make the garment hang in place. Some of these dainty models are done in soutache while still others have designs wrought in narrow braid-like, bias folds of the material.

Brunette Fay King Has Kind Word for Blondes



By FAY KING

THE idea that all beautiful blondes are bubble-brained is all wet! Some of the smartest girls I know are blondes. Their beauty has been more of a handicap than an asset. To praise their work makes them much happier than to compliment their looks.

This talk about blondes being fickle is all wrong, too. The fact is that the giddy men who prefer some blondes are the fickle ones. And changing about among the blondes as they do, the blondes get the blame!

I know countless blondes who have been happily married for years to the same husband, and wouldn't think of giving the least encouragement to any pro-blonde who might give them the glad eye.

It is true there are plenty of pretty blondes swarming around the bright lights collecting diamond props from pro-blonde papas; but there are a great many more beautiful blondes who are busy in their bright little kitchens getting meals ready for home-coming husbands!

Lots of stunning blondes are teetotalers and have never been near a night club!

Blondes are big-hearted.

I have heard a real blonde fib in favor of an artificial blonde and declare her hair to be real. How's that for being fair-minded?

(No! I am a brunette! Always have been and always will be!)

There are many preparations designed to neutralize acid conditions but there is only one that gives quick results and still is so pleasant you'll drink it for its taste alone.

And that preparation has been known all over Europe since 1880. It is called

In the form of appetizing pure white crystals it foams and bubbles when poured into a half glass of cold water.

ROUND TABLE of BUSINESS

By GEORGE H. SNYDER.

A LARGE corporation which is in the habit of making very complete annual reports recently wished to economize.

Instead of mailing copies of its report to all of its stockholders it merely sent brief letters stating that reports would be sent to those requesting them. A surprisingly small number asked for copies.

Although a portion of the investing public is notoriously lax in watching its affairs, it is quite likely that much of the lack of interest in corporation statements arises from the fact that many people do not know how to analyze an income account or a balance sheet.

SOME companies which realize this have started the practice of fully explaining the meaning of each item published in their statements. There is nothing mysterious about the average corporation statement.

MOST annual reports include different accounts, an income account and a balance sheet.

The items listed differ widely with the various companies, but usually the income account starts with the gross income. This is the total amount received for the sale of the companies' products.

From this are deducted discounts, production, sales and management expenses. The amount remaining is the operating profit. To this is usually added any other income such as interest on loans made and returns on various investments outside of the company's regular operation.

Then the interest on the company's bonds and notes outstanding is deducted.

IT IS important to notice if, at this point, provision for depreciation is deducted. Machinery and buildings wear out. In conservative accounting the probable life of all the property owned is estimated and an amount is set aside each year from earnings so that when the property is scrapped a fund will have been accumulated to replace it.

THE ratio of depreciation to the value of physical property differs in each industry so that there is no definite rule which can be laid down on the amount of depreciation to be charged off. It is a good policy, however, to turn to the balance sheet and to compare depreciation with the amount at which physical properties are carried to see if it is likely that the plants will be written off by the time they may be expected to become obsolete.

IF THE company is engaged in mining or oil production there should also be an item in the income account called depletion. This represents the estimated value of the mineral deposit which has been exhausted during the year. The function of this reserve is similar to that of depreciation.

PROVISION should then be made for Federal and local taxes and for any other minor items which should be charged to current expenses. The amount finally remaining is the net profit from which directors can pay dividends to the stockholders.

The principal thing in reading an income account is to see if all these items are charged off. If they are not, the net profit reported does not represent the real amount earned for the stockholders. Some small minng companies and oil companies are particularly negligent about including the depreciation and depletion items. Many corporations also neglect to include Federal taxes in their income accounts.

If this item is omitted it can be roughly estimated by taking 12 per cent of the net income when figures for 1928 are under consideration.

FROM this net income must be deducted any dividends paid on the preferred stocks. The amount remaining after this is available for dividends on the common stock. After subtracting the common dividends paid and any adjustments to previous years, the amount remaining is added to the surplus on the balance sheet or deducted from it if a deficit after all these charges has been shown.

IF THE company has large subsidiaries the income account should indicate whether the statement is for the parent company only or whether it is a consolidated statement. A statement for the holding company will show only the dividends paid to it by the subsidiaries as income. It will not reflect the actual earnings of the subsidiaries.

A CONSOLIDATED statement lumps the earnings of all the subsidiaries and the parent company and eliminates any intercompany items. Such a statement is valuable in that it shows the results for all the properties but it is apt to be misleading unless it is realized that the parent company can pay dividends to its stockholders only from the dividends actually paid to it by the subsidiaries.

Amounts turned into the surplus of the subsidiaries are not immediately available for dividend payments.

The most satisfactory reports of large corporations give a company statement, a consolidated statement and also separate statements for each subsidiary.

PETTING PATTY — Teddy Does Some Scheming

WHAT HAS GONE BEFORE
PATTY WAS KIDNAPED AND IS HELD PRISONER AT BLACK HOUSE BY A MYSTERIOUS "MASTER" IDENTITY UNKNOWN.
TEDDY TOOTLE, RICH AND RITZY, IN ATTEMPTING TO RESCUE HER WAS CAUGHT AND CONFINED IN THE HALL OF ARMOR
PATTY AND TEDDY HAVE HAD ONE KISS. IT REGISTERED ON THE SEISMOGRAPH IN WASHINGTON.
THE "MASTER" OF BLACK HOUSE HAS ARRANGED TO HAVE THEM BADLY SCARED AT MIDNIGHT.
IT'S GOING TO BE A BIG "BOO" PARTY. WE JUST HOPE YOU GET GOOD AN SCARED YOURSELF—YESSIRREE!
POOR TEDDY—I'M RESPONSIBLE FOR THE MESS HE'S IN!—I'M GOING TO GET HIM OUT OF IT SOME WAY!
I'VE GOT TO GET OUT OF HERE AND I'VE AN IDEA OF HOW IT CAN BE DONE!

THE BUNGLE FAMILY — Old General Optimism

THE COLONEL'S DIFFICULTY IN EXPLAINING A PROLONGED ABSENCE FROM HOME, AND HIS RETURN WITH A LARGE AMOUNT OF MONEY, MADE AN IMPRESSION UPON JOSEPHINE BUNGLE WHICH SHE DOES NOT CARE TO SHARE WITH EVEN HER CLOSEST FRIENDS.
SUCH A YARN! THE IDEA OF A MAN BEING AWAY FROM HOME FOR MONTHS AND THEN RETURNING WITH A SATCHELFUL OF MONEY AND A BUSTED MEMORY. THE IDEA! NO SIR! I WONT TELL THAT STORY TO ANYONE AND BECOME THE LAUGHING STOCK OF THIS TOWN. NO SIR! I HATE FIBS BUT A WOMAN MARRIED TO A BRILLIANT MAN LIKE YOURSELF JUST HAS TO MAKE THE BEST OF SUCH THINGS.
I'M NOT WORRIED ABOUT WHAT PEOPLE WILL—
OH, HUSH UP! WE'LL JUST TELL EVERYONE YOU'VE BEEN AWAY ON A BUSINESS TRIP. OH, I KNOW THEY WONT BELIEVE THAT BUT ANYTHING SOUNDS BETTER THAN YOUR PERFECTLY DIPPY STORY.
LISTEN, HOW DO YOU FIGURE THAT THE THEORY OF ME BEING ON A BIG BUSINESS TRIP SOUNDS DAFFY? THAT DOUGH I BROUGHT HOME IS EVIDENCE THAT—TOMORROW YOU'LL PUT THAT MONEY IN THE BANK UNTIL WE FIND OUT WHERE YOU GOT IT. THE IDEA! IT GIVES ME THE CREEPS EVERY TIME I THINK OF SUCH A SILLY SITUATION. OH WELL, I'M ACCUSTOMED TO THEM IN THIS HOUSE.
MARK MY WORD. I FEEL IN MY BONES THAT YOU HIT THE NAIL ON THE HEAD WHEN YOU SAID A BUSINESS TRIP. EVEN IF I WAS A LITTLE CUCKOO MY NATURAL INSTINCTS CARRIED ME THROUGH. IF YOU GET WHAT I MEAN.

ELLA CINDERS — Now Comes Courage

Mr. Cummings proposed to Ella, as you know, but she thinks a good husband should be honest, truthful, brave, and humorous. So she's testing him—he's passed the first two tests—
WELL, IT'S SECOND DOWN AND TWO YARDS TO GO IN THE CUMMINGS-CUPID GAME! HE TACKLED MY TESTS, AND MADE YARDAGE EACH TIME! HE'S AS HONEST AS A REALLY REFORMED BURGLAR, AND AS TRUTHFUL AS YOUR BEST FRIEND!
NOW, THE NEXT TEST IS TO DISCOVER HOW BRAVE HE IS! MANY A MAN WHO'S A HERO ON THE GOLF LINKS IS JUST A DUFFER AT HOME, AND THE MAN I MARRY MUST'NT BE AFRAID OF ANYTHING—EXCEPT ME!
IT WOULDN'T HAVE BEEN HARD TO TRY COURAGE IN DAYS OF OLD WHEN KNIGHTS WERE BOLD, AND A MAN USED A CAN-OPENER TO CHANGE HIS CLOTHES! BUT NOWADAYS THE BRAVEST THING A MAN CAN DO IS TRUMP HIS PARTNER'S ACE WITHOUT TURNING PALE!
What about it? Do you think Mr. Cummings is brave? Ella will soon find out!

Embarrassing Moments

Sir—

I am a lecturer for the Anti-Saloon League, with a great sense of responsibility. Last night, at a tense moment of my thundering sermon, I reached for my handkerchief to wipe my brow. Imagine my annoyance and profound mortification when I discovered, alas, too late, I had pulled out my flask.

Sylvester Doakes.

Steel Shipped to South By Railroad and River

Steel products from Johnstown will leave Glassport Tuesday for barge shipment to Louisville. Transported by rail from the Cambria city and placed on bottoms as rail-river freight to the South, the cargo will consist of more than 800 tons of plates and bars. Barges as well as their load will represent a shipment, since the vessels, built in the Pittsburgh district for use in the lower Mississippi, will be delivered after discharging their cargo.

Formerly immense tonnage in coal was sent south in barges, and steel is being shipped from plants on our rivers. Traffic men have spent much time and effort in promoting river shipments, and it is likely we shall see further growth as southern territory develops and becomes a greater market for steel. That an inland plant should take advantage of the water route to the South is significant.

Honor the Woman Who Works in Her Garden

She Is a Producer, a Good Citizen.

Not enough women are seen working in gardens. And when they are seen, sometimes they act as though they were ashamed of the work.

They ought to be ashamed to BE ashamed of it. Working in the garden is good for the health. It is good for the figure, and complexion, if you wear a sunbonnet, and keeps away useless tissue. Women, remember that if you remember nothing else.

Working in the garden is especially good for the lungs. It is good for old people if they work slowly, gently, avoid the extreme heat and remember that their hearts should beat slowly.

A woman with a good vegetable garden, a busy hoe, a relentless determination to destroy "bugs" and REAL PRIDE IN HER WORK is worthy of every man's admiration.

Also, and what is far more important, worthy of every WOMAN'S admiration. Women all work, live and dress for one another, although they don't know it. It is a wise disposition of Providence which makes woman look up to woman, the better part of the race, instead of looking DOWN at a man.

Ladies, remember Voltaire's advice—"Cultivons notre jardins"—and cultivate your garden.

Raw Usury

A Lawyer Would Know How.

Frank Shakun, convicted in New York as a professional loan shark, probably will go to jail. He lent an old man $600 and charged him $350 for making the loan.

To make that transaction safe he should have been a lawyer. Some loan sharks dealing in bonds and mortgages wouldn't think of imitating Frank S. Shakun's "raw" methods. Their plan would be to send the borrower to their lawyer. The lawyer would charge a fee of thirty per cent of the loan and everything would be regular.

There is always, as William C. Whitney said, some lawyer that can show you how to do anything you want to do.

When He Saw the Head

The Dancing Lady Became Less Pleasing.

"The Head of John the Baptist." A Striking Painting by Charles Ricketts, R. A.

This picture of the old Bible story is interesting in itself. A beautiful woman tried in vain to tempt John the Baptist. It was true in those days, as in this, that "hell hath no fury like a woman scorned." The scorned lady determined to get revenge.

She danced before the king—you see her and him here, after the dance is over.

The king promised her anything, and when she demanded the head of poor John the Baptist, he gave it to her on a platter.

In the lower-hand corner you see the black slave holding up the head of St. John, victim of a cruel woman and a brutal king.

Now, observe that punishment comes, even here on this earth. Remorse, terror and superstitious fear can punish as thoroughly as the worst hell-fire ever described by Cotton Mather.

The king cringes and shudders on his throne. He loathes the sight of the woman that persuaded him to sacrifice and murder a good man. He fears God's wrath. Well he may.

All his power and wealth, the soothing ostrich feather fan that his slave holds behind him, the woman's promise of new delights; dances hitherto not known, cannot comfort the miserable murderer.

Lightning flashes in the sky, and he fears what is coming.

Let us hope that it turns out to be worse than anything he feared.

And let those that contemplate cruelty, crime or any misdeed look ahead and remember that while you may escape the law YOU CAN'T ESCAPE REMORSE.

New York Day by Day

by O. O. McINTYRE

NEW YORK, July 9.—Diary of a modern Pepys: Early for a drive with my wife to Long Beach for a swim and a wag informed us there would be no bathing as Big Bill Edwards was using the ocean. The beach has become a sea side Rialto with players everywhere on the sands.

So after a sea food lunch at the Nassau to Oyster Bay, to me the most picturesque of Long Island villages, and recalled my last visit when I watched Col. Roosevelt and his wife leaving their estate on horseback for a gallop along the country side.

In the evening to dinner with Frank and Bertha Case and complimented Raymond Hitchcock for the facility with which he wears his monacle, it having the fixedness of a porthole in a ship. So home and read "The Closed Garden," a poignant tale translated from the French and written by a 27-year-old American.

Hotels thwart stationery swipers by placing cards on public writing desks reading: "Upon application at the desk stationery will be supplied to guests of the hotel."

Matrimonial alliances between rich New York families are becoming rare. In the past year seven rich sons have married girls entirely out of their social circle. Two wed chorus girls, one a dancer and four became the husbands of girls who were self-supporting in the business world. The hot-house debutantes, however, go in for foreign noblemen, and out of 11 such marriages contracted in the past three years only one is clicking.

Most newspaper men assigned to Wall street play the market—some in a desultory fashion, but the majority with the usual frenzy of the board room addict. With one exception—and he was a managing editor—there is no record of a newspaper man making a big market killing.

All of which is a monument to the unreliability of tips for few in the street receive so many hot tips from the inside as the financial reporter. Some financial reporters are well off, but in every instance they acquired their wealth buying reliable stocks and bonds outright.

The fever of quick wealth almost invariably touches the scrubwomen employed in the Wall Street skyscrapers and with few exceptions they are margin players. It offers a touch of excitement to drab lives but scarcely ever profit. Bootblacks and elevator operators are also consistent speculators.

As one—and who has not?—who has taken a slight beating in the market there are few thrills equaling expectancy of a sudden fortune. Nor is there any despair equaling the roseate dream when it explodes. There was a glorious Tuesday morning when I began slyly to practice hoots for journalism and its anxieties. At 2 o'clock that afternoon I was financially flat as the proverbial fritter and in debt $700. If you think that didn't cure me, you must brush up on Scotch lore.

A certain stretch of South street is a haven of sea-farers from all points of the compass. It is a thoroughfare the New Yorker rarely visits, yet among seamen it is better known than Broadway. It has a sinister aspect and tipsy arrogance, especially after nightfall. And is lined with fly-blown, cheap john stores, feebly lighted lunchrooms, upstairs tatooing parlors and dungeon-like blind pigs. Men carouse here as they do in seaports all over the world and doorways are often dotted with hulking figures in ox-like slumber.

Dropping in at a South street soft drink place I asked for a lemonade. The clerk gave me a where-did-this-come-from look, but, being thirsty, I suggested he might have mineral water. Neither did this add a cubit to my stature. I had a feeling he expected a nurse to come along and take me away.

Noguchi

By DR. FRANK CRANE

A name that ought to rank up along with those of Washington, Lincoln, Nathan Hale, and other great souls is that of Hideyo Noguchi.

He died the other day on the lonely coast of Africa of a disease that he had incurred in his endeavor to find a way to eliminate it.

He belonged to that little band of heroes and visionaries of whom Gerald Massey writes:

"Oh, the prophets, bards and seers,
In the horoscope of nations,
Like ascending constellations,
They control the coming years."

Heretofore most of the members of this band were saints, seers, poets, philosophers, statesmen or warriors.

You can see their statues in bronze in every capital of Europe and in every great city of America. Men like Corleoni, Garibaldi, Napoleon, Andrew Jackson and the like adorn the public squares here and abroad.

But Noguchi was a strange member of this band, for he was a scientist only.

Yet no one has given his life with more unselfish devotion to the welfare of humanity than he.

And what renders him distinctly remarkable is that he fought the real foes of the human race.

His enemies were the enemies of mankind who take a greater toll of human life than battle; they were rabies, rattlesnake bite, trachoma and yellow fever. For the greatest war and the unending war of the human race is the war against the hostile microbe.

He was a true internationalist and represented internationalism in its most perfect form.

He has extended the glory of Japan, not by fighting the Russians or Chinese, but by fighting the enemies of all mankind. In this war he contributed not only the study and research of his great genius but his life itself.

In Japan, in China, in the United States, in Central and South America, where he succeeded in isolating the germ of yellow fever, and finally in Africa, he fought tirelessly.

Some time ago the school children of France surprised the world by voting their most popular hero to be, not Napoleon, but Louis Pasteur. And a general vote of the understanding minds of the world would place Noguchi in the world's hall of fame.

For as has been said, "Every Rumanian infected with infantile paralysis, every Indian with smallpox, every rat with plague diminishes the probable length of my life."

We cannot pity him as his life goes out in distant Africa; we can only envy this happy warrior that he thus dies full armed "in the doubtful ridges of the battle."

Garrett P. Serviss Says:

Where Hail Is a Terror

THIS is written in the Cote d'Or region of Burgundy, where some of France's finest and most celebrated wines are made. It is a region of hills that are almost mountains, of valleys rich with springs and small water-courses, and bordered with sheltering slopes where the grapes love to cluster in the sunshine.

But, as if nature herself had moments of fanaticism, this is also a region where violent assaults are often made upon the rich vineyards, and the producers of that which "giveth its color in the cup" and putteth joy into weary hearts.

I have just been witness of one of these assaults, delivered from the darkened heavens in the startling form of rattling, clashing hailstones. The early spring here was warm and vegetation took a good start; in May the sunshine seemed to weaken, the skies turned cold, and many early buds and leaves were killed. Where there should have been red cherries, appeared only discolored, shrivelled embryos, amid tufts of frost-killed leaves. But the young vines and many vegetables bravely shivered through, and began to promise well. As the temperature rose with the beginning of July, the belated peonies in the gardens burst into a red splendor, and the scarlet poppies in the fields fairly screamed to the eyes of passers by.

Then the sun seemed suddenly to have recovered its natural heat, and in the sweltering temperature that followed for a day or two the June roses on the walls joined enthusiastically in the riot of color, though the peonies soon dropped out of the floral concert, their petals wilting and falling in the unseasonable blaze. But soon the natives began to glance anxiously at the white cumulus clouds rising on the horizon, like new-born snow-mountains. One heard muttered the ominour word, "Grele!" (Hailstorm).

Nothing is so much dreaded here. It is as fearful as an earthquake to the agriculturist. In its worst form it levels everything in the fields and gardens. Not only the vineyards, with their tender shoots, suffer practical annihilation, but fruit trees are stripped of their buds and leaves, young grain is beaten into the ground, and whole crops, the dependence of families that have no other, are destroyed in a roaring, lightning-blinding minute.

Such a storm, or, rather, a battery of such storms, broke over this region, just east of Dijon, the old Dpeal capital, on July 6. Where I live we escaped with bursts of rain only, and with thunder crashes amidst a darkness like night, during which the scared electric lights snapped and went out. But the next morning news came of disaster east and west. In the commune of St. Apollinaire, between us and the city of Dijon, on ground where Caesar fought a battle with Vereingetorix 2,000 years ago, and where another battle was fought in 1870, the hail had leveled more ranks than ever did the cannon, or the Roman short sword, and ruin was spread over broad acres that had contained the promise of abundance. A few hours later came a similar story from the commune of Oisilly, over to the east of us, where the artillery of the hail had battered and crushed other hopes and the fruits of other long days of confiding labor.

I used to see hailstorms in New York State when I was a boy, and sometimes the ice-stones were "as big as a hen's egg"—so we said; but no American storms of this kind, as far as I am aware, ever equal in fury and destructive power the dreadful "grele" of the vine-growing regions of France and Northern Italy. My house at Arcean is an old stone building plated with solid Italian stucco, but this hard material is completely pock-marked on one side with thousands of indentations made years ago by one of these fierce storms. It is no wonder that many people here scoff the skepticism of meterological science, and put their faith in the ability of "hail-cannon" to ward off this "fleau" by counter attacks on the gathering clouds.

Once Overs

By J. J. MUNDY

DO you give too much credit to the educated man and too little to the one who is unschooled and self-made?

College men are not the only ones who possess good judgment.

In fact college cannot make a thinker out of a rattlehead.

Education is most valuable because of its mind training.

Often there is little mind to train—what then?

Not infrequently the college man has studied just enough to pass his examinations, and not enough to retain his knowledge.

A college cannot supply the foundation for good judgment.

Education cannot impart good judgment.

There must be real caliber, brain capacity, an appreciation of the meaning of poise and balance, to make college education worth while.

The man without a college education should not be denied a chance just because he does not possess a sheepskin.

If he has done even fairly well it is a great recommendation to his general ability, and ability is what counts.

The Rhyming Optimist

By ALINE MICHAELS

Old Trees

OLD trees are gracious, wise and kind,
They know, from years long left behind,
The voices singing in the wind.

They know the promise in the rain
That blesses meadowland and plain
And gives its bounty to the grain.
Old trees stand softly whispering
Amid the fresh delights of spring
When daisies bud and robins sing.

Long, long ago their youth went by,
And yet when April's bloom draws nigh
They flaunt fresh banners to the sky.

Old trees have subtly learned men's ways,
They know that where their shadow strays
The weary turn on troubled days.

To all who come for care's surcease
They freely give a swift release
With leafy murmurings of peace.

Words of the Wise

Nothing is so popular as kindness.—Cicero.

Tales that are Told

Worst Story I Have Heard Today

By WILL ROGERS

YOU know, it does take a lot of nerve for a man to ask a girl to marry him these days. Why, he's got to figure in the cost of beefsteak and lipstick and all these here other modern conveniences, whether he wants to or not.

Well, there was a girl by the name of Molly, maybe it was, and she says to her dad, "I don't know whether the Major is going to ask me to marry him or not. He's been awful loving to me and all that, and if he don't ask me pretty soon I guess I ought to give him the gate. What do you think, Dad?"

"Don't you worry, Daughter," says the old man. "The Major will ask you. But don't rush him too hard. The poor guy has got only three medals with palms and alfalfa for bravery. You can't expect the impossible of him. But don't worry, he'll get up nerve enough pretty soon."

Turning the Tables

EVERY guest at Lord Scroop's dinner party was in evening dress except Vandyke. But the latter was not disheartened. He apologized for his attire and began an explanation.

"I was told that I'd better dress," he said, "and so I went round to Lenders, Limited."

Some of the guests began to feel rather uncomfortable. Vandyke resumed his tale.

"I asked for a dress-suit for the evening, but the shopman told me they were completely out of such things.

"'How is that?' I asked.

"'Oh,' replied the shopman, 'Lord Scroop's giving a dinner party tonight!'"

Her Setting Son

THERE was once a small boy who began a diary. His first entry began thus:

"Got up this morning at 7 o'clock; went to school all day till 4:30 p. m."

He showed this to his mother, and she was horrified.

"Got up, indeed," she cried. "What a dreadful expression. Does the sun get up? No, it rises. You must do the same."

And the grammatical woman scratched out the words.

On the next day the small boy again showed the diary with his final entry before going up to bed.

"Set at 8 o'clock," his mother read.

She Remembered

BILLIE BROWN had decided that he would introduce himself to the prettiest girl at the dance. His friends tried to persuade him that this would be very rude, but Billie was not put off by this.

"Pardon me," he said, having crossed over to the lady in question, "but I'm sure we've met before somewhere, though I can't quite remember where."

"Perhaps it's just as well," came the freezing retort—and Billie squirmed beneath her icy glance. "I am the woman who stood up in the street car for three miles whilst you sat and read your paper this evening."

Coincidence

THE expansive man in the train talked all the time; the quiet man answered in monosyllables. As he was leaving the expansive one said: "Well, glad to have met you; fine chat we had—my name's Welsh."

"So's mine," said the other.

The talkative man was nearly carried past his station at this coincidence.

When order was restored, another passenger said: "That's a coincidence, both your names being Welsh."

"Yes," said the quiet one; "mine's Llewellyn."

Isn't It So?

The man who has no sense of humor is apt to get funny at the wrong time.

* * *

What a jolly old world this would be if everything in the world was as attractive as the shop windows.

* * *

A remnant is not always a bargain, as many a woman had discovered after having married a widower.

OH, THESE WOMEN!

By LEOLA ALLARD

A NEW YORK woman at the age of 52, decides she wants an education, like her young lady daughter, so she starts to school. Her husband says: "Now that's fine. I much rather have an interesting and amusing wife than a good cook."

And when a man talks that way, you may be sure he has both.

It's the mental attitude of California that intrigues one more than its climate. Dr. T. D. Beckwith, of the University of California, announces that kissing is safe. "Not all bacteria are bad," says this extremely pleasant person, "in fact many of them are delightful."

The climate assists the mental attitude.

Money and matrimony are moving along now hand in hand. Every day and in every way they get closer and closer.

A husband on the coast is suing a man for $1,100,000 for getting his wife away from him. Imagine, for one wife!

A Los Angeles court gave a middle aged woman $80,000 when she sued a man for proposing and then backing out. She asked $208,867. Just for ONE man!

It would seem that a man or woman should be able to back out between the moonlit night when they were influenced, and the altar where the chains are forged.

Women have the backing out privilege before marriage. Men never have it.

But, the men have their trials. Now, there is the wife who yesterday sued and charged cruelty, because husband wouldn't wear a toupee she bought him, because she felt sure he would look better. He didn't want to look "better." The lawyer for the husband, being bald, suggested that the husband sue her for asking him to cover up his nice shiney pate.

A man of 26 married a woman 51 and says they will always be happy because their tastes are similar. He says he wouldn't expect the world to understand.

Not with its limited experience!

An insurance inspector says that women, by carelessly tossing away their cigarets, cost the fire insurance companies $17,000,000 in one year.

They've been reading too much about acting nonchalant.

Not Money Mad

THE heirs of the late James B. Ford, rubber magnate, who showered them with unexpected millions, present pretty good proof that Americans are not money mad.

Of course few persons anywhere would object to getting a windfall. Probably a majority of those who read these lines have at one time or another speculated upon what they would do if suddenly endowed with a million dollars.

The Ford heirs, wholesome Jersey people, who had gotten along well without any bequests, say they will not change their manner of living.

One will help a friend who is ill and in need. Another will make a long-desired visit. Not one will splurge.

This attitude is, we believe, typical. The pursuit of dollars is largely for the zest of the sport. Contentment is quite possible without a great many of them.
